WHAT IT MEANS.

It is too soon after the removal of obstructions to navigation at the Cascades to measure the benefits to be derived therefrom. It is too soon to yet measure the distance or name the territory that will be benefited in greater or less degree by the completion of this great work. The Dalles will of course, from its position at the head of navigation, and from the fact that it is also the only Eastern Oregon point on that part of the Columbia now open to tide water, which is also in communication with any large area of country, receive more substantial benefits than any other point. Heretofore the country lying south of us has received its supplies from this point to the distance of 200 and 250 miles. Klickitat county, Washington, to the north, Crook, Lake and Grant to the south, have received a large portion of their supplies here and shipped from here a large portion of their products. Sherman and Morrow counties have dealt with us largely.

That the area of our trade is to be increased cannot be doubted. The completion of the work at the Cascades has made The Dalles a competitive point, and hereafter freight rates from the East will not be greater to this point than to Portland, Seattle or Tacoma. What does this mean? It means that the wholesale merchant who desires can locate here and supply the rich agricultural and stock country tributary to this point much more cheaply than from any other. It means that The Dalles can, as a commercial center, give better rates on merchandise to points east of us along the O. R. & N. than Portland or any other place. It means that the area of country tributary to The Dalles will be doubled, because Portland wholesale prices can be met here. It means the cheapest possible freight rates on all products of the country seeking market, and on all merchandise imported. It means unexampled business prosperity for The Dalles, and its speedily taking its place as a new and important business center.

It means more for The Dalles than for any other place; but it means a great deal for a great many other points. Wasco and Klickitat counties ship yearly 1,500,000 bushels of wheat, and for every bushel the farmer will now receive from 5 to 8 cents more than he otherwise would. Sherman county ships from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 bushels of wheat, and on this vast amount from 3 to 5 cents a bushel will be added to what would otherwise be the price. This means that $150,000 to $200,000 will be left yearly with the farmers that otherwise they would not have received. Not only this, but the enhanced price will cause an increase in the acreage that will add considerable to the above sums.

The Dalles has shipped usually from 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 pounds of wool yearly, and while the river competition heretofore has done wonders towards giving us cheap freight rates, it is safe to say that they will be yet further reduced. Our sheep-owners will gain at least a cent a pound, or will at any rate be able to maintain the present low freight rates, if indeed, they do not somewhat improve on them. This means to this industry alone $60,000, and in the country tributary to The Dalles nearly double that sum. It puts us in shape to offer such prices for wool that whether it is brought here or not, the grower will get the benefit of our prices, since they will justify him in hauling it here if better rates are not offered him than he has heretofore been able to command.

All this section will be able to compete with down-river points for the Portland market in vegetables and small fruits, and this is by no means a small matter. Our fruit industries will be largely stimulated, and more than all, as business begets business, our population will rapidly increase, giving our farmers a large and profitable home market.

With all these advantages it will soon be apparent that factories are necessary and will be profitable. We have near us quantities of hemlock, the bark of which is first-class for tanning purposes. We have 6,000,000 pounds of wool to be scoured, and the same amount to be put into blankets and woolen goods for our own people. It will be seen that it is more profitable, instead of shipping hides to the East and importing shoes and boots, to tan and make them here.

All in all, the future of The Dalles appears indeed bright, and we predict for her an increase in population that will make her second only to Portland in the cities of this state, and that will cause her to maintain her well-earned reputation of being the best city of size on the coast. It may truthfully be said of her that she has never had a business failure of any magnitude, and the number of successful and prosperous men on the coast who first laid the foundation of their fortunes in the little city of The Dalles, would almost equal her present population.

With the coming of spring The Dalles begins an era of business prosperity that will extend her business blocks all over that section below the bluff, and cover the gentle slopes above them with the handsome residences of a prosperous, happy and energetic people.
