CUT WITH WIRE ROPE.

How Stone Is to Be Taken Out of an Eastern Quarry.

Those who have indulged in deep sea fishing know how the fish line cuts deeply into the hard wood of the gunwale as it is hauled in while taut. Even an iron protection, after a time, shows the wear of the rope, which is comparatively soft. This, says the Detroit Free Press, gives a clew to the invention of an Albany quarryman for cutting stone. Instead, however, of hemp, he proposes to use wire rope, and with this he will carve the marble and stone right out of its native bed. The wire is wound in strands, and has a very rough surface, powerful machinery gives a strong and steady strain, and the stone, yielding to the constant wear, parts, with smooth edges. It would be easy enough to cut the blocks after they are removed from the quarry, but where the cleverness of the inventor comes in is devising mechanism that can be applied to the stone while in the quarry. This is effected by sinking two parallel channels in the quarry to a depth of little greater than that of the lowest level of the stone to be cut. The channels may be from 2 to 100 feet, or more, apart. At the bottom of each is made a small hole to receive the foot ends of the shafts of the machine. This is the only preparation of the quarry that is necessary. The ropes, which are coiled on huge drums, are then passed around the channels, and as the drums revolve the cutting proceeds. Suitable brakes are provided for the regulation of the speed and pressure. The ordinary speed of the strand is 500 feet a minute, so that a mile length of it passes in six minutes. While the strand is moving, crushed stone or chilled shot and water can be introduced to increase the attrition. Far better, however, than either of these is a composition obtained from the tailings of a magnetic iron separator, which costs about one-tenth as much as the chilled shot. It does not leave the lines caused by the shot, and it can be used over and over again.

Copper in the Tissues.

For several years past the working chemists have claimed that native copper may be found in minute quantities in the tissues of every known species of plant and animal. Since January 1 a commission appointed by the British Association for the Advancement of Science has made 60,000 examinations and chemical analysis by a great variety of processes and has not failed to find traces of copper in a single instance. They found it in the coloring of flowers, in the feathers, beaks and eyes of birds, in the human brain and blood, in the blades, grains and roots of wheat, in the scales of fishes and serpents, in short everywhere.

Bird Caught in Colt's Tail.

Birds that employ hair in the building of their nests come to grief in strange ways. A gentleman who possessed several colts one day noticed a small bird entangled in the tail of one of his colts. It had evidently been on a search for hair and had become ensnared. Cases of birds getting their feet entangled in wool or string are well-known and death usually ensues if human help is not forthcoming.

Bell Fritters.

Two cups of milk, two cups of prepared flour, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, four eggs, very well beaten; a pinch of salt, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon. Beat the sugar into the yolks. Add the milk, salt and seasoning; the flour and whites alternately. Beat hard for three minutes. Fry in very hot lard. Eat hot with lemon sauce. — N. Y. Ledger.

One of the most remarkable things about language is the rapidity with which, under certain circumstances, it changes and under others remains almost fixed.

The title has a great deal to do with the popularity of a book. An English novel in the early days of this century found no readers when announced as "The Champion of Virtue," but immediately became popular as the "Old English Baron."

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits." Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and today stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at Blakeley & Houghton's drug store.
