HOW LONG, OH LORD!

The spectacle of an oppressed people battling heroically for their rights and their liberty, is one that at all times challenges the admiration and the sympathy of mankind. The blood of heroes has, time and again, sanctified the altars of Liberty, and made glorious the history of the world. The stories of Spartacus, Tell and Arnold Winkelreid fill the heart and set the blood tingling through vein and artery. Resistance to tyranny is a theme that has been immortalized in poetry and flowed in fiery sentences from the tongues of orators. Its very essence fills the soul like a sacred song, and those heroes of all ages stand out vivid and distinct from the pages of history who poured out their blood a libation on the altars of Freedom. Our own country, grown to such magnificent proportions that it singly might defy the world, owes its existence to those simple villagers, unknown to fame, who met the army of the tyrant at Lexington and sent it bleeding and broken back to its citadel; to those grand men who at Bennington and Saratoga, at Eutaw Springs and Brandywine, amid the ice of the Delaware, at Trenton, and the snow of Valley Forge, at the Cowpens and at Charleston, for eight years amid the surging of doubtful and desperate battle, and facing, barefooted and hungry, the inactivity of pinching winter, knew but one call, "Resistance to Tyranny;" but one duty, to hew out their country's freedom, or to refuse to survive her enslavement.

Nearly a century and a quarter have elapsed since these grand men made freedom possible for us, yet fresh in the hearts of their countrymen, as though it were but yesterday, is the memory of their sufferings, their heroism and their victory. Well may we be proud of them! But how think you these illustrious dead would think of us if from the other shore their knightly spirits might be recalled? Think you they could believe we were descended from such noble sires? Almost on our borders today a valiant people are struggling for independence, even as our illustrious forefathers did. Against the armed force and determined will of a parent nation an oppressed colony lifts its weak, but courageous, hands struggling for the right to live and to be free; fighting for that justice which tyranny ever denies; pouring on the shrine of liberty as gallant blood as ever flowed through the azure veins of the one-time glorious chivalry of Spain; sacrificing their homes, their property, their all, that they may lift their eyes to the blue heavens from the free soil of Cuba. The world has witnessed no more gallant struggle, and it has witnessed no more culpable cowardliness than we of this boasted free America have been guilty of. We remain inactive while Weyler's bloody butchers murder defenseless women and children, almost at our doors; we sit idle, dumb to the pleading outstretched hands of womanhood, deaf to the agonizing cry of childhood cut down by a ruthless soldiery of a barbarous government; unmoved at the heroic conduct of grand men fighting for their lives, their liberties, their homes, their wives, their children—their all.

We may not be murderers, but we lack little of it, since we might, by the least effort, put a stop to these wholesale murders. Shades of Washington, Marion, Sumpter, Putnam, Greene, and all ye great immortal band of heroes, look down upon your degenerate country and weep tears of shame! Behold us! Seventy millions of people, rejoicing in the bounteous gifts won by your valor, denying to our suffering brethren even the weight of our sympathy. How long, Oh Lord! shall the minions of despotism triumph? How long shall the defenseless fall beneath the sword of the spoiler? How long shall our ears be deaf to the entreaties of the wretched? How long shall the blood of heroes enrich the unhappy soil of Cuba? How long shall the cries of woe, the tears of sorrow, the wail of widows and the sobs of orphans find no responsive chords in American souls? How long, Oh Lord?

Sherman Appreciative.

At a mass meeting of the citizens of Sherman county, held at Wasco Nov. 9, 1896, for the purpose of giving proper expression of their feelings relative to the final completion and opening of the Cascade locks, County Judge John Fulton was chosen chairman and V. C. Brock secretary.

On motion a committee of nine were appointed to draft resolutions, and they reported the following, which were unanimously adopted, to-wit:

WHEREAS, The opening of the locks at the cascades of the Columbia will be of immeasurable benefit to the residents of Eastern Oregon, and particularly Sherman county, and the same has been greatly hastened by the earnest and untiring efforts of the citizens of The Dalles, who on the occasion of the said opening extended much generous hospitality to our people, therefore be it

Resolved, That the long-felt need of connecting the lower with the middle Columbia has at last been met, and that it will stimulate business, encourage immigration and greatly conduce to the prosperity of our country.

Resolved, That we recognize the invaluable aid that has ever been given by the progressive and enterprising citizens of The Dalles, who have ever been foremost in pushing this great work to completion. Their private expressions and their public press have unceasingly kindled the fire of energy in patriotic hearts, who have labored zealously to free the Inland Empire from corporation's grasp by giving us an open river to the sea; and we hereby extend to the citizens of The Dalles our heartfelt thanks for their earnest labors in our behalf. We shall ever remember their courteous treatment at the celebration of the opening of the locks, and the entertainment at The Dalles Nov. 5th. Let us now put forth our united efforts, with renewed courage, to overcome the obstructions above The Dalles by connecting the middle with the upper river, and thus extending commerce three hundred miles further into the fertile regions of Eastern Washington and Oregon.
