Life Positions that McKinley Will Fill During His Term.

President-elect McKinley during this coming term of office will have the appointment of two judges of the supreme court, three members of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, three members of the court of claims and quite a number of circuit and district judges of the United States if the present incumbents retire when they become eligible to retirement on full pay. All these judgehips are for life, with the privilege of retirement at the age of 70 if they have already served 10 years.

Justice Field, of California, has been eligible for retirement in the supreme bench for some years. He is 80 years of age and might retire and have his successor appointed at any time by President Cleveland, but his ambition is to eclipse previous records of length of service on the bench.

Justice Gray becomes eligible for retirement on March 24, 1898.

Chief Justice Bingham of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, and Judge Hanger and Judge Cox, of the same court, also will be eligible for retirement during McKinley's term.

Judge Richardson, chief of the court of claims, died a short time ago and his successor can be appointed by Mr. Cleveland.

Judges Nott, Welded and Davis will be eligible for retirement during McKinley's incumbency.

The term of office of Chairman Morrison, of the interstate commerce commission, expires December 1, 1897, and Mr. Knapp in December of the present year.

All Purposes Answered.

Mr. Northside—Isn't it a wonder that Bloomfield is not arrested for scorching along on his wheel without carrying a bell?

Mr. Southside—It isn't necessary. The authorities consider that the loud golf stockings he wears answer every purpose.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Cascades.

'Tis an ancient Indian legend, "When the golden sun was young," Mount Hood and Henry Adams waged in war; They wreathed the solid mountains from their base beside the stream, And hurled them as fierce missiles from afar.

At that time a solid caseway spanned the broad Columbia o'er, And the rushing, roaring waters filled its length; It stretched in solid archway its span from shore to shore, Gathering from each lengthening cubit greater strength.

The mountains in their anger belched forth the molten rock; Hurling them as from mouth of cannon 'gainst the span; And when the battle ended, earth trembled with the shock; 'Till the mighty bridge which spanned the flood was gone.

You can yet, while passing by there, where the Cascades' angry roar Warns the mariner of danger in his path, See the steaks of the buttments of the bridge which stood before The mountains wrenched it from them in their wrath.

Just beneath, where massive caseway in olden grandeur stood, Stands a wooden fortress, honeycombed with points, Where Phil Sheridan, the soldier, in the strength of young manhood, First gave to wily Savage mortal hosts.

Adjacent stands the cottonwood, where the chiefs of savage men Paid life's last exaltation for their claims: When Chief Chewoweth and others drew the tomahawk again, To drive the white invaders from their homes.

And here, where only Nature his inspiration giveth, Led the Indian to the scaffold—proudly scaled— If by suffering death for others he might bring to those yet living Hope to drive the white invaders from the field.

But to conquer is not for him; his race must pass away; The places which knew him shall no more. The green hills of his father, subject to an alien way, Marks his grave where his father roamed before.

I see him passing by me like dim shadows of the past; His valor and his sorrows left unsewn. The mountains both the grade of his race, Gloomy, silent, swift with stories of his wrong.

The iron arm of Progress clasped him in its fierce embrace; He is crushed beneath the foot of human greed. The problem of his being is left for man to face: Does advancement bring to better human need?

No more along the mountain trail his daughter's voice will ring; Her music's lost in silence, and her song Yet trembles in the aspens, while her spirit on the wing, Tells no tale of long oppression or of wrong.

His canoe upon the river is lost to mortal sight; His warriors ever ride in phantom boats; He has sunk beneath the surface of the river's conquering might, His paddle in the driftwood ever floats.

Now there springs from out the silence of a dead race passed away, The genius of the white man's power and state; And he seeks to wrest the rapids from the river's conquering way, To check its restless speed with stone and gate.

Where once the gods in vain upheld their bridge of stone, The tiny hand of man exerts its power; But his work will pass away like the dead race that is gone, And the river will be ever water there.

Broad Columbia! mighty river! fitting emblem of the great! Thy waves shall wash the sands of fleeting time; And the race which seeks to curb thee shall be leveled to the state Of this dead race, lost to history and to rhyme.

The Bridge of Gods is fallen, for the look you'll look in vain; The hand which formed the mountains shadows all. Brings the seed-time and the harvest; brings the hailstorm and the rain; Brings to justice all his creatures—unjust nations to their fall.

Grand Columbia! glorious river, sweeping matchless to the sea; Bearing on thy heaving bosom nature's wealth, You have swept the ages past—for a past eternity, And will sweep on where mankind is lost in death.—Contributed.

Stands at the Head.

Aug. J. Bogel, the leading druggist of Shreveport, La., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is the only thing that cures my cough, and it is the best seller I have." J. F. Campbell, merchant of Safford, Ariz., writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery is all that is claimed for it; it never fails, and is a sure cure for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds. I cannot say enough for its merits." Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is not an experiment. It has been tried for a quarter of a century, and today stands at the head. It never disappoints. Free trial bottles at Blakeley & Houghton's drug store.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J.
