EASTERN OFFICE—230 to 234 Temple Court, N. Y. City. E. KATZ, Agent.

A LARGE JURISDICTION.

The supreme court has taken a new departure recently in the hearing of an argument on a demurrer taken on appeal from this district, in the case of the State against Ed Martin. There are perhaps some niceties of the law that may, might or could be decided in the case; but why take the time of the supreme court, that has plenty of business anguishing for its attention, to get an opinion on these hair-splitting quillies of practice and procedure? Martin is in default, being dead. The process of the court cannot be served on him, nor its judgment executed. Between his body and the court the clouds that cover alike his witness and his vices, lie silent, but all powerful. No bailiff can enter his peaceful abode; no sheriff may shackle, no mandate move that inanimate clay. For him there is no terror of imprisonment, no fear of punishment; he is alike beyond the power of earthly courts to convict or acquit. The grave has settled that, and Death, from whom there is no appeal, has assumed a jurisdiction which even the supreme court of this great commonwealth may not dispute. Why then waste time in trying demurrers or motions, or anything concerning him, or his? Why devote days to metaphysical discussion that this or that shade of microscopical distinction of criminal nomenclature may be established for future guidance in other abstruse discussions of legal will-o'-the-wisps? O'er in the beyond Martin rests secure, at least, from interference by our courts here, and if the common opinion concerning the legal fraternity is correct, tolerably safe from them in the hereafter.

Time was when the grave ended criminal litigation, but the supreme court of this state has dived deep and brought up a subject matter from beyond it. It is time, high time, that the number of our supreme judges be increased. With their attention devoted exclusively to affairs of the living, it will take it two years to catch up with its work, but now that it has come to judge the dead, who is there shall say when the end shall be?

Janus has found his prototype enscenced under the great dome at Salem, one face turned toward the future, ready to judge that which is yet to be; one turned to the past to judge that which has been, but is not. It is sincerely to be hoped, for the standing of our supreme court, that the rulings of the court below may be sustained, else how with the mandate shall the supreme court return the prisoner into the jurisdiction of the original court? Without jurisdiction of the person, how may the lower court proceed? We do not even hazard a guess, but respectfully refer all who may care to calculate the result, to one King Canute and his tilt with the sea.

MORE ABOUT COAL.

The Dalles Commercial and Athletic Club has proven a grand success, not only as a source of social intercourse and enjoyment, but as a grand factor in the advancement of the city's interests, and in aiding in the development of its resources. It has already done much. Before it are grand opportunities to be grasped and made subservient to our prosperity.

There is one thing that above all others demands its attention and commends itself on account of the vast benefits that may possibly flow from it. That is the development of our coal fields. All that is needed to test this matter is a diamond drill, and all that is needed to procure this drill and have it operated is $500. It is not expected the club will advance this from its own resources, but it, and we believe it alone, has the ability to provide the money for the purpose. Its members are our bright and prosperous business and professional men. They meet within the club-room on a common level of self and public interest. They may discuss the merits of the proposition, and if disposed can, without much effort, furnish the means.

At the risk of becoming tiresome, and of being called a crank, we again urge the necessity of some action being taken. A good coal vein once put in operation here, would mean in a few short months the doubling of our population, a rapid and general increase in property values, an extension of our business and trading of trade. We cannot afford to even delay, let alone doubt the experiment. Work can be conducted as well in winter as in summer, and with the work begun now, the early days of spring would see the matter settled.

Gentlemen of the Commercial Club, the matter rests with you, and your fellow citizens anxiously await your action.

It is the same old story and yet constantly recurring that Simmons Liver Regulator is the best family medicine. "We have used it in our family for eight years and find it the best medicine we have used. We think there is no such medicine as Simmons Liver Regulator."—Mrs. M. E. S. Adington, Franklin, N. C. Each member of our family uses it as occasion requires.—W. B. Smith, Mt. Vernon, Ky.
