HE DISLIKED TO MAKE TROUBLE.

Mrs. Sarah Maria Everly's Experience With Rev. Aminadab Salsify.

"If there is any person whom I dread to have my husband bring home for the evening, it is a bashful man who is afraid he is afraid he is going to make someone a little extra trouble." So said Mrs. Sarah Maria Everly at the regular weekly meeting of the guild in Portland, as she finished sewing a lace frill on the bottom of a cotton nightgown, destined at some future time to grace the person of some beighted brunette of the upper Congo.

"I shall never forget," she continued, "our first visit from the Rev. Aminadab Salsify from Wayback. Harry and I had been married for seven years, the Rev. Aminadab performing the ceremony in my native village of Wayback. Harry was employed in Portland, and at the time the Rev. Aminadab made us a visit we were living in a handsome modern cottage on Ninth street. Harry was glad to see our old friend, and so was I, yet, at the same time, his fear that he was in the way, or that he was making someone work, made his visit a regular nuisance. The fall rains had set in, and the weather was decidedly chilly. About 7 o'clock in the evening Harry was called down town, to remain most of the night, and at 9:30 the Rev. Salsify retired. There was a lavatory opening off from the bedroom, but this seemed to be beyond the power of our Rev. friend's ken.

"At 10:30 I went to bed, and about the mystic hour of midnight I heard the side door close and the spring catch snap viciously. I could not at first imagine what had happened, but instead of it suggesting burglars, the idea struck me that our Rev. friend was somehow mixed up in the affair. There was a hydrant in the yard, used during the summer for irrigating, and stepping out of bed and peeping out of the window, I saw the Rev. Salsify quenching his thirst thereat. Of course it never occurred to him that there was water in the house, and there he had gone pirouetting out into the rain, his long, white nightdress giving him a ghostly appearance in the dim light. After he had taken, I should judge, a quart of Willamette mixture, he came back to the door. Of course it was locked. I slipped down quietly, thinking to let him in, and trusting to the darkness to prevent his discovering that I was not dressed for company. I reached the door, opened it, but my friend, who disliked troubling anyone, had gone around the corner of the house attempting to discover some means of ingress. I called him, but there was no answer. I was thoroughly out of humor by this time, but realizing that I must take the Rev. gentleman in out of the wet, or be responsible for his death, I stepped on the porch in order to again call him. Unlucky movement! I had not left that door three feet before some spirit of darkness, or imp of the perverse, entered into it, or that total depravity which pervades inanimate objects after night, moved it, and moved it to a close. There was a gentle jar, a snap of that confounded spring lock, and the Rev. Aminadab Salsify and the mistress of the house were both outside, dressed in their night-robes, without a key, and no one inside to come to their aid.

"I am not certain that I did not swear, but if I did I feel that the recording angel charged it up to the Rev. Aminadab, or blotted it out with a tear spared from his laughter. My night-blooming friend came back in a moment, ghostly and silent, and seeing me, asked what I was 'doing there?' I was unarmed, and there was neither club nor stone handy, hence the Rev. Aminadab still lives, but it was due to circumstances, for which I am not to blame.

"Fortunately Harry came home earlier than he expected, and if ever the sound of a man's footstep was music to that man's wife's ears, his was to mine that night.

"In a few minutes we were both inside, and I was in my bed, doubled up like a pocket comb, and shivering with cold and rage; and yet that husband of mine laughed, laughed and giggled until he got into bed and I put both my feet in the middle of his back.

"The Rev. Aminadab Salsify returned to Wayback next day, having had a sufficiency of city life, late hours and Willamette water."

A tired stomach is very much like a sprained ankle. If you suffer from any of the symptoms of dyspepsia, your stomach is tired. It needs a crutch. We must relieve it of all work for a time, or until it is restored to its natural strength. To do this successfully, we must use a food which is already digested outside of the body, and which will aid the digestion of other foods that may be taken with it. Such a product is the Shaker Digestive Cordial.

The Shakers have utilized the digestive principles present in plants for the manufacture of this article, and its success has been truly phenomenal. You can try it for the nominal sum of 10 cents, as sample bottles are sold by all druggists at this price.

Something to Know.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. Sold for 50c or $1.00 per bottle at Blakeley & Houghton's Drug Store. (2)
