The Value of Flax.

From the test made by competent experts in Ireland on a sample ton of Puget Sound flax, a report made to Dr. A. W. Thornton, of Whatcom county, Wash., indicates that, when properly grown, the flax of that section will be worth for its fiber $500 a ton. The importance of this news to Oregon lies in the fact of the similarity of climatic conditions in Western Oregon to those of Western Washington. It should be noted that information and skill necessary to success in growing flax for fiber needs to be acquired. Dr. Thornton is in a position to acquire this knowledge, and upon its impartment to farmers of this region a flax movement will undoubtedly be inaugurated of great volume and profit.
