A MODERN BENEFACTOR.

J. Pierrepont Morgan, the eminent his gang, recently elongated Uncle ing the role of philanthropists. Samuels leg some $8,000,000 worth, is now being eulogized by the news-000,000 to be used in building and millions left over for ourselves. maintaining a lying in hospital in New York.

The gift is undoubtedly generous, the object certainly one beneficial to ized, and remained until after it adhumanity. It is perhaps the correct thing not to "look a gift horse in the left in jeopardy, for all of his supmouth," and certainly the gift should not be refused because the money He was not recognized as a part of was obtained by disreputable means. the new house, and consequently re-At the same time we fail to see any mained in session, where he must good and sufficient reason for hold- have stayed indefinitely if Riddell ing Morgan up to the world as a humanitarian.

Senator Stanford devoted millions to the cause of education, but he robbed the government of the United States out of money in his Central Pacific railroad manipulation, and then only gave 40 per cent of his illgotten gains to charity. It is true Morgar might have kept all the plunder extorted from the government's ne cessities, instead of giving up sixteen per cent of it to charity. The magnificence of the gift causes us to forget the magnificence of the plunder edy can take its place in our home, as

If we carried the principle down into smaller transactions, it would show its true inwardness more forci- just as good as Dr. King's New Discovbly. Suppose, for instance, some ery. They are not as good, because this poor devil should steal eight horses, remedy has a record of cures and besides would his crime be condoned by giving one to St. Vincent's hospital? Or suppose a burglar should break into one of our banks and swipe $20,000, would his offense be condoned and he held up as a public benefactor if he gave $5,000 to the school fund? We fancy not. We even believe that the men who lost the horses would want the thief prosecuted, and we feel quite certain that the banker who was robbed, would not fall on the burglar's neck, to weep tears of gratitude down his honest back, because part of the money had been devoted to charity. And there you

The fact that all the people were robbed of a trifling sum each to make up Morgan's $8,000,000 fund, made the theft easy to bear. It was nobody's loss, because it was everybody's loss; hence we condone the offense and pat the successful thief on the back for his exceeding char ity in giving a portion of his plunder, gathered from the whole country, to his native city.

Americans are full of a maudlin sentimentality; so full that they slop over on all occasions. We hold up our hands in holy horror at the murderer of innocent girlhood, and sub scribe money to pay a venal lawyer to defend the criminal. We fill our newspapers with gush about the redhanded criminal; and get up "public sympathy" for him that is intended to, and does, influence the jury that tries him. Our women tear one another's clothes in the wild struggle to present the pure-minded murderer, who has outraged and murdered one of their innocent little sisters, with flowers typical of his innocence. Our courts sit in owl-eyed wisdom day after day, assisting defendants' counsel to find some hair-splitting quillet 10 Great Singers! of the law that will permit trial after trial, until the accused walks forth purified of all sin, and takes to the stage to show, with all the effects of calcium lights, the details of the every day at noon. butchery, that all may see and ad-

The heart of every sensible citizen grows sick with shame at the contemplation of our own damphoolish-

ness. We need a decided change all around. We need more sense and less sentiment; we need more statesmanship and less politics; more justice and less juggling with law; more punishment and less praise for grand larcenists. We need a few monuments such as made the virtues of Haman famous, and less slobbering newspaper comment in praise of political tricksters, posing as statesmen; magnificent threves in the garb of Wall street highwayman, who with financiers, and treasury looters, play-

The muddle at Salem has assumed a different shade; but it remains to be seen whether the political pool is growing clearer.

The True Remedy. W. M. Repine, editor Tiskilwa, Ill. "Cheif," says: "We won't keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds.
