

Oregon Notes.

Coyote hunts are growing very popular in Eastern Oregon. The sheepmen of Wallowa county are the latest to organize to rid that section of these pesky animals.

One school district in Lane county, located in the mountains at Jones' saw-mill, has levied a 60-mill tax. The district has just been organized and it is desired to raise $500 for the purpose of building a school house. The small amount of taxable property makes the high tax necessary.

Earl Sargent, the university student who is wanted in Eugene on a charge of burglary, is still at large. He was seen on the road leading to Pleasant Hill by Constable Sid Scott, but made good his escape. Several shots were fired at him by the constable, but were not heeded by the fugitive.

KIRBY CAUGHT A COUGAR.

A Brave Union County Man Displays a Cool Head and Monstrous Nerve.

Richard Kirby, who is considered one of the most daring hunters in Union county, while returning home recently was attacked by a fierce cougar and nearly devoured.

Many great feats have been accomplished by the daring hunters and trappers of this county. James Holcomb, a few years ago, killed twenty-seven elk in one band and lassoed a 900-pound sturgeon in the turbulent waters of the Snake.

Pies Brown made himself famous not long since by lassoing and branding a huge deer.

Six Shooter Bill had a terrible struggle with a wild cat and her kittens and received some very bad injuries before extricating himself from the infuriated animal.

But none so far have excelled the feat accomplished by Richard Kirby. He was riding along at his usual gait when suddenly a weird sound caught his ear. It was like that of a woman crying in distress. But no! He recognized it at once. It was the cry of a wary cougar. One moment and the beast had leaped to his side! What to do he knew not, but quickly calling to his memory the feat of poor Fritz, the Prussian boy, who saved his life from a fierce wolf by seizing the animal in his embrace and carrying it home, Richard, quicker than thought, seized the cougar in his tight embrace and gallantly loped away to his father's mansion. He shows a few bad scratches on his hands, but is as bright and jovial as ever, and says he would not take the world for his remarkable experience or give up his pet.—Silver Sentinel.

KEEPING A HOLIDAY.

How Shall We Plan to Get from It All the Good It Can Give?

What is sure to make it a red-letter day?

What is the very best way to spend it? How shall we plan to get from it all that it can give? To make the very most of a single day, a holiday, a day that we are at liberty to spend as we like, may be something of a puzzle.

It suggests the question—what do you care most about doing with all your time? Time is the stuff of which life is made, and just to be sure of what we care most to do with it is worth thinking about.

Most young people, and in fact pretty much all persons, have some favorite occupation or study, or both in one, some special direction in which they are strongly drawn, that lies outside of the daily necessary routine of work. For those who have ordinarily but little leisure (and in this busy work-a-day world this includes the majority), the indulgence of this private liking is a capital use for at least a part of the holiday. It may lead to important results or it may not—the thing we are most eager to do may be a mere amusement of which we soon tire, or it may be the thing that we were made to do, the real serious business of our lives, which circumstances have seemed to put beyond our reach, yet which perseverance will enable us to achieve.

However that may be, there is no question about the pleasure of doing the thing one likes best. It may be music or history, or football, or wood-carving, or what not—there is certainly a very keen satisfaction in following one's own personal taste. And the chances are that if you are enough in earnest, something worth while will come of it. Too much is made of the motive of making money. It is well to remember that there is another kind of satisfaction in good work, in every kind of employment, done for its own sake. It does not make much difference what the work is. Any kind of useful or beautiful thing done, in the measure in which the heart is thrown into it, doing one's very best for the sake of seeing it well done, is good and satisfying. Time spent in this way is well spent.

If there is any such thing as a secret of happiness, it is surely this—make others happy. And all good work is an antidote for selfishness. Not only that, but it is one of the surest, most lasting and rightful sources of continual happiness. To talk about work as the best play—the best resource—for enjoying a holiday, seems on the surface a contradiction. But the best play is not idleness merely. To be worth having, it must be some kind of activity, and to be really delightful, it must be something loved. To make the most of a holiday, then, it is quite fair to do the very thing that you care for personally, however unimportant it may appear to somebody else.

Something is due to the day itself. Is it Thanksgiving day? Are we not more ready to give thanks in sincerity for material blessings, for abundant food and rich dress, prosperity in the shape of money, houses and lands, than for better culture and richer gains in building up our own characters and lives? Yet these are worth more.

Is it Christmas? Do we think of it as a time of gifts, of merry making, of unusual gaiety and self-indulgence, or do we care first for its higher meanings? Do we make it a time of good will toward all, a time for earnest thought and generous deeds to promote the welfare of those whom we love, first, but also, so far as we may, of all our human brothers and sisters?

Even on a holiday, and perhaps most on a holiday, when our time is free from ordinary claims, a little honest discussion with one's self of the very best uses and objects to which we can devote a little of our time will not come amiss.—Country Gentleman.

FASHION IN INSTRUMENTS.

Beautiful Irish Harps to Be the Vogue This Season.

There is a fashion in musical instruments so far as the English young woman is concerned which compels changes as sudden and sweeping as those which take place in regard to the same young women's bonnets and hats. Of course all of them who have pretensions to being considered what is vaguely termed "musical" reckon among their accomplishments the ability to play the piano, and they do not disdain to devote the surplus of their portable ability to instruments of a more portable kind. For a time it was the banjo, then the mandolin, then, taking a flight upward the violin itself was degraded into the position of a "fashionable" instrument, dividing its claims with the violoncello. We are said to be now on the eve of another change. According to Music, the instrument which is to be in vogue this winter is the Irish harp, which many young women belonging to the very smartest society are said to be already industriously practicing. It is not the large and rather unwieldy thing we are wont to see in the street orchestras, but a beautifully finished and decorated little instrument, some 30 inches in height, and about the weight of a banjo. It is, in fact, the article which the minstrel boy slung behind him when, with his father's sword girded on, he set forth on that heliocentric expedition of which the ballads tell us. The tone of the Irish harp is said to be particularly sweet, though a little thin.

BESSIE'S GREAT SACRIFICE.

She Felt Sorry for a Baby Who Had No Doll.

The stockings had been hung up and the little ones gathered around the hearth to hear mamma tell the story of the Babe of Bethlehem, says the New York World. Their small faces expressed profound sympathy when they heard how the Son of God was born in a stable, how He lay on a bed of straw, how He shivered in the cool December night and how His life was in danger from the wicked Herod. Little Bessie seemed to be particularly impressed. She said nothing, but one could see that she was thinking hard.

When, half an hour later, mamma came to Bessie's bed to kiss her good night, she found the child pressing her doll to her bosom and gazing at it with unutterable affection. As she stooped over the bed Bessie looked up and asked, earnestly: "Mamma, ain't God's baby got any dolls?"

"No," replied the mother, smiling. Bessie looked at her doll again and hugged it. Then conflicting emotions showed themselves on the little face. After a long silence the child raised her eyes, which had such an expression as those of the martyrs must have worn at the stake, and said, firmly: "Take it to Him, mamma."

Closing her eyes tight Bessie laid the doll in her mother's hands and buried her face in the pillow to try to forget the great sacrifice she had made.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.
