A RARE TRANSACTION.

The action of George Schneider in connection with the failure of the National Bank of Illinois is of so remarkably peculiar a nature as to deserve comment and publicity. He was known as the father of the bank, having been connected with it for years. He had retired two or three years ago, but was still nominally its president, the vice-president performing his duties. The latter wrecked the bank. Although not legally bound, Schneider felt that he was morally so. He turned over to the bank $200,000 of his own money so that every dollar could be paid in full. Some of his relatives had borrowed money from the bank or the strength of their relationship to him. He took up these notes, amounting to more than $200,000 more. He then notified the directors that if there were any claims for which he could in the most remote way be considered responsible, he stood ready to pay them; but it was conceded there were none.

It is an idyllic picture of a very wealthy man looking at a vast financial transaction from the simple Aedean view of it. It is a rare picture that may well find a place on the walls of the public memory to stir to life the hope that humanity is not utterly degenerate.

NEWSPAPER WAR.

The Oregonian has stirred the Salem Statesman to its depths by the assertion that Salem was a filthy town, with bad water, foul alleys and disease-breeding combinations, or words to that effect. The Statesman has a right to lose its temper and to pass the lie direct to the big contemporary. A paper that won't stand up and fight for its own town has no excuse for existing. That is what it is for. The Statesman admits Salem has plenty of mud, but insists that mud "in the winter time" is the normal condition of the Willamette valley, and even of Portland. That is one reason the constitution provides for the meeting of the legislature during the winter season. It takes lots of mud to run it, especially when a senator is to be elected.

The Statesman sees in the attack of the Oregonian the entering wedge of an attempt to remove the state capital. While we hardly think the Oregonian meant more than one of its nasty flings, and was not serious in its remarks, we concede that it will bear watching, and it would not be at all surprising to see it advocating that measure.

Still another sign that humanity is advancing all along the line comes from Iowa, where a federal judge recently, in charging a jury in a liquor case, told them that they need not hesitate over the lack of proof that the whiskey furnished in this case was an intoxicating liquor. He said: "This court is not a drivelling idiot, and it presumes the jurors are not. It presumes that each and everyone of you know what whiskey is, what beer is, and what a whiskey cocktail is, and that all are intoxicating. This court takes judicial knowledge of the fact that these drinks are intoxicating, and if you do not know it, it now instructs you that they are." If the example of this judge should prove contagious, the first thing we know the courts will be trying cases on their merits, instead of on a fierce array of technicalities and soul-harrowing suppositious propositions with wooden-legged premises and halting conclusions. "The world do move."

The dispatches from Cuba today state that Spain has changed her policy regarding that unfortunate island, and has ordered Weyler to treat with the insurgents, even going so far as to authorize him to sell the island to them. This would be good news, if true; but who can believe it? It is said that Weyler has gone to meet Gomez in order to make some arrangements with him; but it strikes us the story needs considerable salt to make it palatable. One trouble with the Cuban dispatches is that no reliance can be placed upon any of them, and certainly none on this.

The United States senate adjourned Wednesday afternoon. That's where it had the advantage of the Oregon senate, that just failed out like a piece of blue calico.

In five days more the big fight at Carson will come off. The great windmills will face one another and return blow for blow.

Beaumont and Fletcher said: "Calamity is man's true touchstone," and yet most men dislike being touched.

Something to Depend On.

Mr. James Jones, of the drug firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with La Grippe, and her case grew so serious that physicians at Cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develop into Hasty Consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from the first dose, and half dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to do this good work. Try it. Free trial bottles at Blakeley & Houghton's Drug Store.
