The King's Daughters will meet at Mrs. W. S. Myers' tomorrow afternoon.

The East End has caught on to the prevailing dullness and refuses to contribute an item.

Quite a gang of men are at work near the depot straightening the track and changing the switches.

Sunday morning Constable Hill went to Hood River and arrested an Indian, who is accused of stealing a lot of sturgeon.

The Utah Northern and Oregon Short Line will both be operated after the 15th in the name of the Oregon Short Line.

It is reported that an Indian caught stealing sturgeon from a line below the Cascade Locks one day last week, was shot and killed by the owner of the line.

The Dalles City left the locks at 12:45 today and should be in about 5 o'clock. With good weather and no delay at the locks the run will be made more quickly than ever before.

The oranges and lemons advertised by a certain firm in today's issue may have been procured legitimately, but the price suggests a doubt. The consumer needn't kick though, he gets the benefit of the doubt.

Revival meetings are going on in the Christian church, being conducted by Evangelist F. L. Pierce. The services begin at 7:30 p. m. Good singing and a good time is expected. Everybody is invited to attend.

As manufacturers of men's neckwear Rufus Waterhouse Co. are acknowledged to be at the head. This line is carried by Pease & Mays, who have just received and put on sale a large shipment of these goods.

The sheriff this afternoon sold a small piece of property near town belonging to Mr. Granger, to satisfy a judgment of about $700, including costs, in favor of J. W. Blakeney, who bought the property for $75, hardly enough to pay the costs.

The drill ordered by T. T. Nicholas and others for the purpose of prospecting for coal, was shipped from Aurora, Illinois on the 10th, and should arrive here about the 25th. It will be put in place and operations will be begun as soon as possible after its arrival.

Antelope has been having trouble in its schools, resulting as we are informed in the discharge of Professor Lake for conduct that should forever disbar him from the practice of his profession. The school will be continued to the end of the term in charge of Miss Lewis.

Prineville has developed a new and profitable amusement, it being nothing less than driving the timid jackrabbit into a corral and killing him numerously with clubs. The second drive of the season was made about a week ago, resulting in the death of nearly 400 of the long-eared pests.

The Dalles Commission Company have entered the field and are now bidding for the sturgeon trade, having advanced the price to 9 cents per pound. If the slap-bang of our cylinder press is no longer heard in your midst, you may rest assured we are looking for a location to stretch a line in the deep water of the Columbia where the festive fish are wont to sport and play.

From the way sturgeon have gone up in price, the lenten season must be receiving more than usual observance. The price has gone up steadily from 4 cents to 9 cents, at the present time, and the end is not yet. It is strange that things work the way they do. Here are fish doubling in price just when the demand is greatest, and eggs are up to 50 cents a dozen about the holidays when the Tom and Jerry season sets in.

DIED.

In this city, Saturday, March 13th, Eleanor, widow of Charles Adams, aged 76 years and 7 months, she having been born in Pinkton, Ohio, Aug. 21, 1820.

The funeral took place at 10 o'clock today from the family residence, Rev. J. H. Wood delivering the sermon. Interment in Sunset cemetery.

Mrs. Adams was one of the pioneers, arriving in Oregon in 1850 with her husband, and settling first at Oregon City, then moving to Albany, and coming to The Dalles about the year 1880. She was a woman of tireless energy, large-hearted and charitable, of a gentle and lovable character that won all with whom she came in contact. She leaves six children—Mrs. D. M. Freheh, Mrs. E. F. Laughlin and Miss Irene Adams, all of The Dalles; Mrs. W. L. Hinkle of Antelope, Amos Carter of Milton, and W. R. Carter of Newberg.

Her death was not unexpected, her age and physical condition making it impossible for her to recover from the severe attack of pneumonia which was the cause of her death. Surrounded by her children, all of whom were present, she passed over to the beyond, leaving behind her the example of a pure, womanly and Christian life, filled with good deeds and abounding in charity.

THOSE ARABESQUE PATTERNS.

Hallucinating Dress Goods, Calico With the Jim-Jams.

Our dry goods stores are displaying a new dress goods known as arabesque. The figures remind one of Jacob's cattle, being ring-streaked and striped. It is calico with the jim-jams, the figures writhing and intermingling like the conglomerate serpents of the third stage of delirium tremens. We want to warn our young gentlemen, as the warm summer days approach, that he has a case of swearing off on hand. He has either to forego the foaming beer, the cooling juleps, the lemonade with a stick in it, and all that sort of thing, or cut loose entirely from the summer girl, with her arabesque waists and serpentine trimmings. The modern young man's brainlet will never survive the shock of the combination. It takes good nerves to stand either, and the arabesque pattern of inebriety is the more trying of the two.

A waist of that material, with a fair female pulsating within it, reminds one of the circus and its concomitant side-show, the fat woman, who toys with an armful of snakes and wears a genuine boa around her neck. That's the way they strike us now, at a remote distance, so to speak. What the effect will be when they get plentiful and all the pretty girls are wearing them, of course we are unable to say, but we suppose one may get accustomed to them.

Other towns may have trouble in assimilating that sort of thing, but a Dalles girl is irresistible in any guise, and would be—will be attractive even though, like the Furies, she wore snakes for a head gear.

It is to be hoped that the new arabesque waists may be fashionable during lent, as the sight of them daily will take the place of almost all other required penance.

If some pretty girl, with a good deal of spare time will call around at this office occasionally and get us used to the combination by degrees, she will confer a favor that will be appreciated by us, more than by the balance of the family.

The Fall of Davis.

This is the way the Corvallis Gazette sums up the house of Davis:

Alas, poor Davis! His house cannot adjourn. Without a quorum it can but adjourn from day to day, and a quorum will never come.

Some members adopted a resolution to dissolve, but what of that? There was no quorum and the adoption of the resolution was illegal. The Davis house cannot adjourn.

Davis has gone home, haunted with the consciousness that his house has not adjourned. In his waking hours, voices whisper, "No quorum, no quorum," and in his dreams there runs the refrain, "Bayer, Barkley, Bourne, Bridges, Blyeu," and so on down the list of those who would and those who would not. He awakens from uneasy slumbers to hear the night shriek, "you can't adjourn, adjourn, adjourn." Other houses may come and may go, but the Davis house goes on forever. It may resolve to dissolve, it may scatter to the uttermost parts of the earth, it may hide its hapless head from the gaze of man, but still the mighty truth rings on, "The Davis house cannot adjourn." There is no escape for Davis. Though he fly to Cuba and follow the fortunes of her struggling patriots, the gurgling wounds of every Spaniard slain will moan, "You can't adjourn." Though swift to far-off Crete he flies and helps its noble cause, yet every Turk will curse at him and cry, "you never can adjourn."

The song will haunt him to his last sad hour and on the slab erected where he sleeps, this tribute will appear:
Here lieth one whom Heaven nor Hell can hold,
For mighty Truth proclaims him still on Earth.
Yes, when this circling sphere itself grows cold,
To know naught more of human woe or mirth.
His spirit still is doomed to linger on,
The last and only evidence of man.
Ask you the sin of this most wretched pawn?
His house has not adjourned nor ever can.
