EAST OREGONIAN RIGHT.

The East Oregonian, commenting on the Northwest Dramatic News, a paper just started in Portland, and whose title suggests its objects, tells some very plain truths in its usually plain and straight-forward way. It takes the News to task for giving the Carnita company a flowery send-off, and very properly points out that its influence will be nil unless its statements can be relied on. We confess to having been derelict in our duties in this line, and we hope to make a better record in the future. We realize the hard lines some of these companies play in, as well as the hard lines they play, and—well we hate to kick a man when he's down. At the same time, we purpose hereafter being honest to our own people before being generous to any more snide companies.

The worst feature of the matter is that a show visiting a town comes indorsed by the papers of such towns as it has appeared in. Unfortunately, all editors being big-hearted, the press notices are not substantiated by the facts. Consequently the local paper can only give, before the show, the opinion expressed concerning it by some of its contemporaries. We intend to assist in correcting this evil, and by so doing aid also in getting a better class of entertainments.

Our notices of shows that have appeared here can hereafter be relied upon by our exchanges, and we sincerely hope that the balance of the papers in the state will take the same view of it, so we can rely on their's. A little concerted effort on the part of the Oregon press will go a long way towards turning some talent that now bums from town to town into the channel it is more fitted for, that of hard and unskilled labor.

Judge Kean, in the suit of Susan Marquet vs. William Marquet for nullification of their marriage, Wednesday held that the marriage of a party divorced in Washington within six months of the divorce, is void, and that whether the marriage took place outside of the state or not. He cited the decision of the supreme court that the divorce is suspended and inoperative to the extent of the marriage prohibition clause, and consequently at the time of the marriage outside of the state a divorced party must still be considered as having a husband or wife in the state. There is no doubt but that this decision is correct, and it will cause considerable of a flurry, as there are hundreds of such cases in the state.

We are in receipt regularly of a number of Hawaiian papers, all of which are strongly in favor of annexing the islands to the United States. We confess to a decided change in opinion on this subject since reading their presentations of it, and we believe that if the American people understood the question fully such a sentiment would be awakened as would force congress to accede to it. The "Pearl of the Pacific" should belong to us, and when some other power captures it, or attempts to, we will insist on having it. We can get it now peacefully; then it will probably require a war to accomplish it.

Pendleton levies a tax on dogs, and collects it on fifty of them. Either Pendleton is short on dogs or her collection department needs remodeling. A tax on dogs here would at a dollar a head raise revenue enough to light our streets, furnish us water and construct a sewer system, and then have dogs enough left to run the pound.

Considerable comment has been made over an advertisement appearing in the Oregonian a few days ago,

While we do not agree with the paper in most things, we do not for a moment believe that it would print knowingly that advertisement. Somebody was careless, that was all, and neither editor nor business manager knew anything of the nature of that advertisement until after it had been printed. The editor has enough sins to answer for without being compelled to father that one.

The question of calling a special session of the legislature is still being agitated. We see no use in calling it unless some guaranty could be made that it would meet. Such as it was, the people had enough of it to last them a life time. It was like the boarder's criticism on the beef-steak, when he smilingly told his landlady "There is enough of it such as it is, and it is good enough what there is of it."
