PASTURAGE WANTED.

"Hon. W. C. Willis, at the request of numerous citizens of this county," says the Prineville Review, "wrote a letter to Governor Lord asking him to intercede in behalf of the people of Eastern Oregon in their fight to have the Cascades thrown open for the pasturing of stock this summer and asked the governor to make a special request of the president.

"The governor immediately referred the request to Hon. John Minto, a man who is familiar with the situation, and in a reply to the governor he said:

I believe Mr. Willis' statement as to the effect which may follow exclusion of Eastern Oregon stock, sheep in particular, from feeding on the Cascade range all of the summer and fall season they can safely keep there, is not overdrawn. I heartily agree to both his propositions: first, the reduction of the reserve to reasonable proportions, in the interest of the people, and, second, as the cheapest and best means for protecting the plant growth on the summit of the Cascades from destructive fires—that is, as a citizen of Oregon, I believe the setting apart as a permanent reserve the Bull Run reserve to the care and management of the city of Portland, under the guaranty of the state, in order to secure the purity of its water supply, is a liberal and good act. Second, is to set apart 320,000 acres, including Mt. Hood and as much of the summit ridge of the Cascade range southerly from the Columbia river as that area would cover. Third, 30,000 acres, to include Mount Jefferson and the summit ridge northward. Fourth, 900,000 acres, to include Crater lake and cover the summit ridge from the California line northward. This, excluding the Bull Run reserve, would aggregate 1,250,000 acres for the use of the sentimental summer-resort people, who, in Oregon, are the principal advocates of this reservation. It would also be an act of liberal provision for a class who would increase with its population.

Having seen these reforestation going on all that time; having spent money and labor to check it on lands where the cattle and sheep were constantly kept, in my own experience and observation in the valleys and on the mountains, I am constrained to believe that the grazing of sheep and cattle in Eastern Oregon, as far as the Cascade range as they will feed, will be a protection, rather than an injury, to the forest growth there, and to harass stock-owners and their employes for feeding their stock where to leave what they take would be an easy means of destruction to the timber, is a needless prosecution, to the injury of citizenship.

The letter of Mr. Willis and Mr. Minto's statement have been forwarded to Congressman Ellis urging that the matter be promptly brought before the authorities at Washington, with the hope that action would be taken looking to the relief of Eastern Oregon. A petition asking that the reserve be reduced in size, signed by the governor and members elect to the legislature, was forwarded some time ago to congress. It is hoped that this matter will be settled at an early day and the stockmen then can tell what is in store for them.

Kalama is having a religious revival, caused, it is claimed, by a miracle. The strange event that has set the community there to arguing, debating, affirming, denying and doubting was the suddenly-acquired ability to read of a Mrs. Hoggatt. The lady claims that she was practically unable to read, which statement is endorsed by her neighbors; but that devoutly praying to be permitted to read her Bible, the gift came to her, and she was enabled to read, and that well.

The appointment of Col. John Hay as minister to England we fear is based more on sentimental grounds than on merit. However, the most bitter enemy of England could not ask a better appointment if the redoubtable Col. could be persuaded to write the life of Victoria. He possesses, in a remarkable degree, the power to damn with faint praise and surfeit with overdoses of the same taffy. His fulsome descriptions of Lincoln detract from the greatness of that grand and rugged character. Hay would call Mt. Hood "cute" and the Columbia river "pretty," and indulge in sesquipedalianism in telling about Baby McKee or Ruth.

All indications point to a good harvest and fair prices. Wheat will not be less than 50 cents a bushel, when the crop comes in; that much is sure, and it is probable it will not fall much below the present prices. With the combination of good crops and prices, Eastern Oregon ought to have, as Sandy Bowers said, "Money to throw at the birds."

Deaf Smith county, Texas, made a heavy Republican gain in the last election. McKinley got three votes, whereas Harrison did not get any.
