HE UNDERSTANDS THEM.

Commander Booth-Tucker, leader of the Salvation Army, has been in Portland for some time, and has been in demand as a revivalist at several of the churches. A gentleman of our acquaintance last night was telling us of attending services a night or two before conducted by him. He did not understand why he made any impression at all, and was astonished that any sane person could desire his assistance in church work. He describes him as an animated jumping Jack, with the gestures of a French dancing master, without an original idea, and of an intellect far below the average.

It takes just that kind of a man to run the Salvation Army business, and that accounts for his success in that line. Henry Ward Beecher, with all his great mind, could not appeal to the class Booth-Tucker reaches half so strongly. The clapping of hands, blowing of police whistles, beating of tambourines, and all that conglomeration of noises that seem almost desecration to a refined mind that contemplates religion rationally and soberly, are just the thing that catch the rabble. Conversions are made under excitement, and are more or less lasting generally being less. The Salvation Army is not recruited for life or during the war, but, outside of the officers, the common soldiers generally get tired in a short time and quit; but in their place come many new recruits.

Booth-Tucker is picturesque, catchy, and well adapted to the task he has set himself. In church he would prove a failure; in the barracks he has demonstrated his ability as a leader of that class who seek the spectacular in religion.

The New York Herald, Times, Tribune and Evening Telegram, the big four papers that were behind the United Press Association, have withdrawn their support after losing nearly one million dollars, and the association has collapsed and will go into the hands of a receiver. The United Press was created for the purpose of making a great news trust, of freezing out the Associated Press and controlling the entire news field. It was the intention not only to control all the business, but actually to control politics and manipulate the government. News was to be furnished such as suited the association, and that that run contrary to their desires was to be suppressed. It was an unholy alliance, and its destruction is a matter for general rejoicing.

Little Greece still pursues the even tenor of her way, and sticks to her determination to annex Crete. Her actions are such that the British admiral in Cretan waters informs his government that "Colonel Vassos, commander of the Greek army in Crete, has practically declared war against the powers." That is what he has done, and that is what Greece is doing. The plucky little nation sees that the powers cannot agree, and understands that in this lies her protection. Consequently she goes right along, knowing that none of the powers dare interfere, for fear of bringing on a general European war.

The prospect for the speedy passage of the Dingley bill, and the consequent placing of the tariff on wool, has greatly stimulated the wool market. Millions of pounds have been, and other millions of pounds are being imported, to avoid the duty, and the local market already feels the effects. There is but little wool for sale by the wool-growers, but already there is a demand for it, and several sales have been made of wool still on the sheep's backs.

Citizens of Omaha insist that they nightly see an airship flying over the city. At first most of us were skeptical, but all Omaha rises up now to insist that the airship is seen every night cavorting around through the upper regions. What detracts most from the statement is the fact that it is seen over Omaha. Anything would get around that famous burg if it could, even if it had to go over it; so it may be an airship, and it may be only the recent moral wave that has flooded the country, flying high over Omaha.

Major-General Thomas H. Ruger, commanding the department of the East, will be retired from the active list of the army next Friday, when he reaches the age limit, 64 years. He has made a good record and retires full of honors, to the enjoyment of a serene old age.

Representative railroad men have perfected a scheme for building a magnificent car, which is to be presented to the government for the use of the president. It will be the finest in the world, and the expense of building it will be borne by the leading railroads of the country.
