A GOLDEN STOREHOUSE.

Within the next five years gold mining will assume an importance in the Northwest never before accorded that most exciting of pursuits. The beginning of this new era is already here. The immense district north of Spokane is attracting world-wide attention. The North Fork of the Cœur d'Alene is again coming to the front with mines of fabulous richness, leading one to hope that the vast storehouse from which the placers of Prichard creek were enriched, has at last been discovered.

Mining has always been looked upon as a speculative pursuit, and such, under the old methods, it has been. Science has changed all this. Refractory ores, the bane of the old-time miner, are now eagerly sought, for the secret of extracting the precious minerals from them has been discovered. Iron pyrites, alone, were enough to make the old miner toss the ore aside, no matter how rich it might prove to be under the blow pipe, because the pulp assay would show nothing. This has been changed, and Le Roi and other of the great mines along the border, are all refractory ores, being composed of iron and copper sulphurets. There are wild-cat schemes yet, as there will always be, but the conservative business man can now find opportunity to invest in mines purchased by men who know their values, worked on scientific principles, and economically managed.

Mining fell into disrepute on the coast more through the management of the Comstock properties and other Nevada mines. Then and there conditions were different, objects different. That was the day of wild-cat; the day when the English investor had not yet cut his eye-teeth. The Nevada mining ring assisted him in accomplishing that dental labor. Anything was good enough to beat an Englishman with, and many a hole in the ground down in that section shows that the victims, as well as the mining sharks, were numerous. They bought anything at any price. Now science has come to their aid; mines are no longer bought, they are bonded, and prospected before any considerable sum of money is paid over. The business has become legitimate, and with its vast possibilities for wealth, and quickly-acquired wealth at that, it is attracting more and more attention every year. It is no longer gambling; no longer a passing over of vast sums to strangers to do what they pleased with and report only to each other.

We predict for the Northwest a mining boom that is going to be unprecedented, and that is going to show to the world that not in Africa, but in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, is the great golden storehouse of the world.

THE OPULENT STRAWBERRY.

The prospects for an immense strawberry crop at Hood River, Mosier and The Dalles were never better, although the season may be a trifle late. The increase in acreage is most noticeable at Hood River, though it has been increased here. There the area has been increased fully one-half, and this year it is quite probable that three, and perhaps four, carloads a day will be shipped. We have heard fears expressed that the market will be overstocked. We do not believe it. We heard the same thing when the shipments from Hood River reached 2500 crates a year; yet last year that much was shipped in five days and the demand was not met. Omaha, St. Paul, Kansas City and Denver can almost take up the entire crop, and when it is considered that the Chicago market is open to these berries, it will be seen that it will take a much larger supply than has yet been produced to begin to meet the demand.

Hood River ought to get $75,000 for her berry crop this year, and with average conditions of weather, we believe she will.

There have been fears expressed that the orchard trees were seriously damaged last fall by the extreme cold weather. While it is undoubtedly true that some damage has been done, a close examination fails to show that it is of any great extent. However, this cannot be definitely settled until the trees have been given a chance to bud, and until that time the careful orchardist will think twice, at least, before cutting down, or even back, his trees. It is time enough to do that when it is proved that the trees are dead.

The man who eats because he is hungry is, thus far, on the level with the brute. The man who stops eating the moment his hunger is appeased is the wise man. Nature needs no more food than he calls for. Continued excess brings about indigestion or dyspepsia, with loss of flesh, strength, sleep, ambition and mental power, and an accumulation of aches, pains and many dangerous local maladies.

The stomach now can do nothing alone. We must appeal to some artificially digested food which can also digest other foods. That is to say, we must use the Shaker Digestive Cordial. The effect is prompt and cheering. The chronic pain and distress ceases. Appetite presently revives. Flesh and vigor gradually comes back, and the sufferer recovers. But he must be careful in future. A trial bottle for 10 cents.

Laxol is the best medicine for children. Doctors recommend it in place of Castor Oil.
