The Elections

The elections in the East show Democratic gains in most of the large cities, the greatest being in Chicago, where Carter Harrison was elected mayor by a plurality of 88,000 over Sears, Republididates in the field, polling together 90,-500 votes. In Kansas the women voted, and the result showed that the majority of them were Republicans. The Republicans carried St. Louis by 15,000. In Kentucky, among other things, was the election of a member of the legislature to fill a vacancy caused by death. The Democrats won. Carter's phenomenal vote in Chicago was due largely to the fact that he was the son of Carter Harrison, the mayor murdered a year or
