Stars did not "catch on" to the idea that the Champions purposely let them win. No, that is a fact, we did not catch on to the idea, but such a thing as an idea could not materalize from the brains of the Champs, but nevertheless, as we were not playing a game of ideas, it was outside of our line of business to eatch on to anything except a base ball which we managed to catch on to often enough, and at all times in due season, to "goose egg" them six innings and score a record that they cannot overcome with all their new-fangled ideas and ball games in big print. The White Stars believe that the test of superiority is best established by demonstration in the "Field of action," and we stand ready at any time to back up this proposition by results materialized on the diamond, and we did not organize for the purpose of playing ball or ideas through the columns of a newspaper, although it seems so far that this kind of ball is the one game that the Champs (chumps???) can play to a perfection.
