GUBERNATORIAL COURTESY.

Frank Hense, the Centralia banker, who was indicted by the Chehalis, Washington county, grand jury recently, is liable to cause, if he has not already caused, a coolness between the governors of Washington and Minnesota. Governor Rogers issued a requisition on his fellow-governor for Hense, who is now a citizen of Minnesota. An officer named Johnson was detailed to visit Minnesota and bring Hense from thence back to the hence from which he skipped. Everything ran along smoothly, and Hense at one time agreed to return with Johnson to Centralia and there stand trial, and would perhaps have done so had not Governor Clough of Minnesota interceded and told him not to go. When Johnson's attorney suggested that Hense should be arrested, Clough got mad and said it should not be done. He lost his temper apparently, and expressed his opinion of the governor of Washington and the party he represented in unmistakable terms that were devoid of sarcasm: "Those d—d Populists in the state of Washington don't want to prosecute a man; they want to persecute him," and then he told Johnson that on no kind of a showing, as long as he was governor, would he surrender Hense, whom he knew to be an innocent man.

Now we hold that the language was a trifle strong, and the expletive concerning the Populists uncalled for. We therefore conclude that what the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina will not be repeated by the gubernatorial gentleman of Washington to his contemporary of Minnesota.

CRITICUS OF DRESS.

The press of the East is disposed to poke fun at Mr. Bailey from Texas on account of his dress. Mr. Bailey wears a sombrero, instead of a silk tile or "stove pipe;" a long frock coat instead of the cutaway or swallow-tail, so dear to the dudelets of the effete East. He does not take kindly to toothpick shoes, and those other little digressions of fashion that exist for a season or two, to become a matter of ridicule afterwards.

We would suggest to our facetious cousins of the far East that they had better judge a man not by the hat he wears, but by what is under it. Not by the cut of the coat; but what is in it. Mr. Bailey has shown himself a man, and a bright one, while the pencil pushers who have been trying to excite the laughter of those who read their alleged wit, are certainly not bright, if we judge them by their productions. The most amusing thing about the whole lot is that the Philadelphia papers think he is behind the times. Shades of Ben Franklin! has it come to this, that the dead from that old cemetery rise up from their graves to point their bony fingers scornfully at the young and growing West, and to cackle their maxillary gibberish from behind their desiccated sternums anent live people's clothes? Criticism from an English-sprung New York dudelet we can stand, but from the antiquated denizens of Philadelphia, the city of the dead, never.

Senator Mason of Illinois made his maiden speech in the senate Wednesday, upon the motion to change the rules of the senate so that debate might be shut off after a reasonable time. He remarked that there was a majority of "insurgents" in the senate ready to act, but was held back by the minority in control. It was time to do away with these barnacle rules. Continuing, he said: "I would not scuttle the old ship, but I would like to put her in the dry dock long enough to have her bottom scraped." He continued in this strain some time, and evidently considered that the United States senate was the place where the first work should be done on the ship of state.

The retro-active amendment to the Dingley bill will not pass, and, indeed, it was never intended that it should. It was simply proposed to prevent importers taking advantage of the present tariff laws to import goods in advance of the Dingley bill becoming operative, and as it failed to accomplish that purpose, it will be stricken out.

The Kentucky senatorial muddle seems to be no clearer than before. Dr. Hunter, who has been within one or two votes of election for the past month, withdrew, Wednesday the convention broke up in a row, and there seems to be no hope of any election.
