ENDEAVORERS' CONVENTION.

The Fourth Held in the County Met at Hood River Thursday.

The fourth annual convention of the Wasco county Christian Endeavor Union met in regular session Thursday and Friday in the Valley Christian church, and proved to be the most interesting and profitable session yet held.

The session opened at 10:30, with E. H. Merrell, president, in the chair, and after a short song service Rev. J. L. Hersiner, of Hood River Congregational church, delivered the address of welcome, which was responded to by the undersigned in behalf of the visiting delegates.

In the afternoon the time was occupied first by a devotional service, led by Curtis Egbert of The Dalles, followed by the president's annual address, the reports of the secretary and treasurer, and short addresses on committee work.

In the evening the convention listened to a most eloquent and instructive address on the life of Christ by Rev. J. A. Wickham of Portland.

On Friday morning at 6:30 there was a sunrise prayer meeting, led by Mr. McCoy of Hood River valley. The session resumed at 9:15, and after a short devotional service, the business matters of the convention were discussed and considered.

At 10:30, being the Junior hour, Mrs. W. D. Palmer of Portland took charge and conducted a service, assisted by about thirty Junior Endeavorers, which would fairly discount similar gatherings of senior endeavorers with which the writer has had experience.

Another repast was spread in the grove near the church at 12 o'clock, and it is needless to say that ample justice was done thereto.

The last hour or two of the convention was devoted to sundry matters of business, the appointment of a committee to look into the work of organization of new societies in the counties, and the closing consecration service, led by Miss Cleaver, being a quite helpful and impressive service.

The Dalles delegates returned on the Regulator last evening, and can all testify to the generous hospitality and exceeding kindness of the good people of the city and vicinity of Hood River, who seemingly spared no pains to see that we were all royally welcomed and entertained during our short visit among them.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Ray Logan arrived home from Eugene last night.

Mr. N. B. Brooks, the Goldendale attorney, is in the city.

Misses Effie and Vesta Bolton left this morning for Goldendale, where they will visit friends.

The family of Mr. Chas. Stone left for Seattle today, where they will make their home. Mr. Stone will join them later.

Mrs. Graves, who has been visiting her mother here for several days, left for her home, North Yakima, this morning, going by way of Portland.

Mr. E. Y. Judd, of the Pendleton scouring mills, arrived this morning, and in company with Mr. J. W. Russell, went down on the Regulator to White Salmon, where a team was waiting for them. They intend putting in two or three days fishing at Trout Lake.

ALL BEANS.

Diet of a Boston Frenchman While Confined in a Prison in Cuba. Sixty-two days. Three meals a day. Beans for every meal.

That was the record of Pierre Richelieu's imprisonment by the Spanish authorities at Santiago de Cuba.

If Pierre was a native Bostonian he would probably have liked nothing better, but he was born in France, and is a man of the sea withal, and that protracted period of subsistence upon beans has left rancor in his heart and utter demoralization in his interior economy.

Pierre had taken out naturalization papers in Boston previous to risking his life, liberty and digestive machinery in Spanish territory. He hoped fondly, but vainly, that this ceremony would render him bean-proof. In his travels about the world he had heard of the vast use the Spaniards made of beans.

He is now "standing off and on" about the corridors of the United States district court in Boston, waiting for the authorities to look up his "citizen papers," and with them as a basis to file a $20,000 claim against the government of the dons for the destruction of his intestinal equipment.

Pierre's complete name is Pierre Gustave Laymet Richelieu. In February of 1895 he found himself in Port au Prince, Hayti. One day he started out in a little boat called the Yankee Doodle, and, with a companion named August Bolton, went fishing along the coast for turtles.

A storm drove them out of their reckoning, and on a dark night they went ashore upon the coast of Cuba. No sooner had they set foot on the soil than a lot of vigilant rancors thrust them into prison as insurgent sympathizers. There they remained 62 days.

Now, Spain feeds her army and navy principally upon beans, and the Spanish captors reasoned that what was good enough for the warriors of Castile was certainly good enough for rebel suspects. So beans they got, and nothing more. The weary weeks of confinement and bean diet were punctuated with cheering announcements from time to time, that they might expect to be shot within a day or two. "Well," says Richelieu, "they didn't do that, but it's about the only thing they didn't do. We had nothing to eat but beans."

Whether it was really the beans or the fear of death that did it, within a few days both the men were so ill they could scarcely stand. They managed at last to gain the notice of the American consul and were released. There was no evidence against them. They came back to New York, victims of beans and Andalusian perversity, and demanded that the United States government obtain redress for them.

Bolton's status as a citizen was all right, and the American minister at Madrid has been ordered to present his claim for bean damage. But poor Pierre was in no such luck. His papers—the first set taken at Portland, Ore., in 1872, and the second at Boston, in 1878—were all made out in the name of Gustav Laymet. His statements about them have all been verified. His tale is unquestionably true, but he says the papers, which he had with him when he was seized in Cuba, were taken from him and kept by the Spaniards.

Not having them in his possession, and the fact that he took them out in a false name, have sadly blocked his claim to damages for the bean treatment. But he lives in indignation, and hope that the whole matter about the papers will be straightened out very soon, and that then he will get money enough from Spain to live on "plum duff" for the remainder of his days.—N. Y. Journal.

Moralizing by Japanese Youth.

An English teacher in a Japanese school discovered, by giving out subjects for composition, that pupils had been trained to find a moral in everything animate and inanimate. Mr. Hearn, in his "Glimpses of Unfamiliar Japan," gives a few specimens of the moral ideas evolved from the native students by subjects for English composition. One boy thus wrote on "Mosquitoes": "On summer nights we hear the sound of faint voices, and little things come and sting our bodies very violently. We call them ka—in English 'mosquitoes.' I think the sting is useful for us, because if we begin to sleep, the ka shall come and sting us, uttering a small voice; then we shall be brought back to study by the sting." To another pupil was assigned the lotus (Japanese peony) for a composition, and he wrote: "The lotus is large and beautiful to see; but it has a disagreeable smell. This should make us remember that what is only outwardly beautiful in human society should not attract us. To be attracted by beauty only may lead us into fearful and fatal misfortune."—Chicago Inter Ocean.
