Necessity is the mother of invention, and among those which this hot weather has called into existence chapeaux a glace are perhaps the most ingenious and extraordinary. This new article is neither more nor less than a top hat fitted with an inner apartment for the reception of a fair-sized lump of ice, which freshens the layer of air about the head, and is yet so thoroughly waterproof that you may wear it for hours after the ice is thawed without experiencing the slightest discomfort.

But the conversation was long and interesting, and might not have ended so abruptly as it did but for an unforeseen accident. A neighbor of the possessor of the patent hat, having paid the waiter, leonidly donned his own silk top hat, rose up, stretched himself and then exclaimed hurriedly to a friend: "Thank it is killing hot this evening. The perspiration is coming off my head in torrents."

"What have you been eating for dinner? Not mushrooms, I hope? But first take off your hat and unbutton your vest." The moment the hat was removed a large chunk of bluish ice dropped into the wineglass on the table, knocking it on to the ground, where it smashed with a loud crash that aroused the attention of the public.
