THE ROYAL NAVY. Not Much Chance for Training in the Modern Ships.

The anonymous author of "Life in the Royal Navy " which has just been printed in London, points out that "the keen competition between ship and ship in our squadron did much to re-lieve a sea life of its ennui. During the day we were busy making preparations for any evolution that the admiral might signal to be carried out in the evening, so that when it came the work was performed with much zest by all hands. The tremendous desire to be first was such as to lead to hazardous running in and out and climbing on the mast and vards. This splendid training to keep men fit is now lost to us with the large abolition of masts and yards. and nothing of equal importance has been established to compensate for it. Something has been done in the way of physical drill and gymnastics, but there is much room for improvement in the same direction. The men should, in my opinion, be granted greater facilities for taking part in those exercises on shore that are at present doing so much for the youth of the country."

Lower Life of the Ocean.

Below half a mile in depth the water of the ocean is intensely cold, remaining both winter and summer at a point only slightly above freezing. The contents of a trawl hauled up from the floor of the sea at the equator will be found to include mud and ooze that is nearly freezing. All of the life in the vast waste of waters called the Pacific is either near the surface or at the bottom. The abyssal fishes cannot live except under the enormous pressure of water-amounting to over two tons to the square inch at three miles down-to which they may be able to City yesterday, bringing with him five endure this, the tissues of their bodies big gold nuggets, the largest valued at and even their bones are very loose in texture. Though solid enough under the conditions to which they are accustomed, they are soft and pulpy when dragged up to the open air. Their eyes protrude and sometimes they actually burst open.

A Queer African Bace.

The Mandingoes, who inhabit a tract of country in Africa, are strict Mohammedans in religion, but, curious ly enough, they still rotain many of the superstitions of the negro raes from which they surrent.
