Why Spain Has Failed in Cuba.

General Weyler should have subdued the rebellion within ninety days. No unprejudiced military authority who has studied the two forces, and made due allowance for the advantages possessed by those who fight upon their native soil, will dissent from this proposition. There are Spanish generals in Cuba who admit its truth. There are others who have returned disgusted to Spain because their suggestions of plans to end the war were not allowed to be disclosed at the Palace. A four months' stay in Cuba, beginning in January and ending with April of this year, much of which time was passed in observing the forces in the field, has resulted in the conviction, on my part, that it has not been the purpose of General Weyler to end the rebellion. Conversations with Spanish officers, from generals to corporals, showed that the same motives that were evidently actuating the commander in allowing the war to drag along were prompting a large proportion of the staff and line in carrying out the policy of their superior. The recital of a few experiences, the description of actual conditions, an explanation of methods employed, and an account of the poor result achieved where success was possible, will prove this indictment. It is admitted that General Weyler has the slightest military ability, the situation in Cuba today will convict him.—Thos. Gold Alvord, Jr., in the July Forum.

Four Hundred Barrels Daily.

Practically all the wheat now coming into Pendleton is shipped in over the W. & C. R. R. line and is being made into flour as fast as it arrives. The Pendleton roller mills are grinding about 2000 bushels of wheat every 24 hours, turning out daily 400 barrels of flour. A year's output of this one of Pendleton's mills would make a pyramid of flour about the size of Mount Hood and just as white.—Tribune.

"For three years we have never been without Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house," says A. H. Patter, with E. C. Atkins & Co., Indianapolis, Ind., "and my wife would as soon think of being without flour as a bottle of this Remedy in the summer season. We have used it with all three of our children and it has never failed to cure—not simply stop pain, but cure absolutely. It is all right, and anyone who tries it will find it so." For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.

Super's Baby Boy Found.

PORTLAND, July 3.—The body of Sandy Soper's baby boy was found today buried in Montgomery gulch, Albina, where Soper confessed he had placed it.

Soper was recently arrested at Ashland for murder committed in Missouri, and taken there for trial. After murdering his wife and two children in Missouri, Soper came to Portland, and married again. His second wife bore him a son. Soper disappeared from Portland, taking his son with him, and it now transpires that he murdered this son also. After he was taken to Missouri he confessed to the murder of the child, and told where its body could be found.

Coal Market Demoralized.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—The St. Louis coal market was never in a more demoralized condition, and some of the operators welcome a strike, as a means of leading up to adjustment of prices and placing the market on a better basis. The St. Louis market draws most of its bituminous coal from the Central and Southern Illinois districts, and, despite the announcement that the strike will go into effect tomorrow, the operators do not think their fields will be affected for two weeks, and perhaps three.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

For past three years has been attending to business, and says Dr. King's New Discovery is the grandest remedy ever made, as it has done so much for him and also for others in his community. QUEEN'S CHAMPION.

An Official Whose Duty It Is to Throw Down a Glove.

A Chivalric Title Which Has Been Held by the Dymoke Family Ever Since the Days of Richard II.—Scott's Description of the Challenge.

The death of Francis Dymoke, the queen of England's champion, which occurred at Horncastle recently, has reminded the world that even in the midst of the present prosaic and utilitarian age one knightly office, at least, is in existence, to contradict the assertion of Edmund Burke that "the age of chivalry is gone." The late holder of the office was a Lincolnshire magistrate and an officer in the local militia; the two previous ones were clergymen. The office is not, as it has often been stated, hereditary to the Dymoke family, but is attached to the lord of the manor of Scirelsby, which is held by the ancient tenantry known as grand serjeants—i. e., where one holds lands of the sovereign by service which he has to perform in person. The service by which Scirelsby is held is thus quoted by the New York World: "That the lord thereof shall be the king's champion."

The championship has no salary attached to it, for, though the Dymoke family hold Scirelsby on the feudal tenure of performing this duty, they have been owners of that manor for upward of five hundred years, and they obtained it, not by royal grant or out of the public purse, but by marriage with an heiress, the last of the proud line of Marmion, granddaughter of Philip de Marmion, a name which recalls memories of chivalry and of the poetry of Shakespeare and Sir Walter Scott. There is no record of the office under the Saxon kings, but, according to the late Sir Bernard Burke, its duties were appended by William I. as an honor to the old baronial family of Marmion, or Marmion, the ancient owners of the manor of Scirelsby. This manor, together with the castle of Tamworth, had been conferred, soon after the Norman conquest, on a Robert de Marmion, lord of Fontenoy, in Normandy, on condition of performing the office of champion at the king's coronation.

The name of Dymoke is Welsh. The Dymokes, or Dymocks—for the name is spelled both ways—claim a traditional descent from Tudor Trevor, lord of Hereford and Whittington, and founder of the tribe of the Marches. The chief himself had three sons, the second of whom, marrying a daughter of the prince of North Wales, half a century before the Norman conquest, became the ancestor of one David ap Madoc, who, in the Welsh tongue, was styled colloquially Dai Madoc, the word Dai being the short form of David. His son and heir was David ap Dai Madoc, or David Dai Madoc, and by the usual abbreviation Dai Madoc came to be the name of the tribe to be pronounced as Dymoke or Dymock, the transition from which to Dymoke or Dymock, and again from that to Dimos or Dymoke, is easy and obvious.

The first, then, of the Dymoke family who fulfilled his office as champion was Sir John Dymoke, knight, who married Margaret Llewellyn in the reign of Edward III., and was present at the coronation of Richard II. His claim was disputed by Baldwin de Freville, the lord of Tamworth castle, but after deliberation it was found that the right belonged to the manor of Scirelsby, as the caput baroniae or head of the barony of the Marmion family; and as it appeared that the late King Edward III. and his son, Edward, prince of Wales, known as the black prince, had often been heard to say that the office was held by Sir John Dymoke, the question was settled in his favor.

The Gentleman's Magazine for 1821 contains a picture of the royal champion, Henry Dymoke, in the act of riding on his white charger into Westminster hall, and throwing down the glove or gauntlet of defiance, supported on either side by the duke of Wellington and the marquis of Anglesey, also on horseback, while two heralds stand by on foot with tabards and plumes. The performance of the champion on this occasion is thus described by Sir Walter Scott in a letter to one of his friends:

"The champion's duty was performed, as of right, by young Dymoke, a fine looking youth, but bearing perhaps a little too much the appearance of a maiden knight to be the challenger of the world in the king's behalf. He threw down his gauntlet, however, with becoming manhood, and showed as much horsemanship as the crowd of knights and squires around him would permit to be exhibited. His armor was in good taste, but his shield was out of all propriety, being a round rondache, or Highland target, a defensive weapon which it would be impossible to use on horseback, instead of being a three-cornered or leather shield, which in the time of the tilt was suspended round the neck. Pardon this antiquarian scruple, which you may believe occurred to few but myself. On the whole, this striking part of the exhibition somewhat disappointed me, for I would have had the champion less embarrassed by his assistants and at liberty to put his horse on the grand pas, and yet the young lord of Scirelsby looked and behaved extremely well."

The last time the ceremony of the challenge was carried out was at the coronation of George IV., when Henry Dymoke, the deputy of his father, a clergyman, threw down the gauntlet in Westminster hall. This Henry Dymoke, soon after Queen Victoria's accession, was created a knight as a recompense, it was said, for waiving his claims to discharge the duties of his office at the queen's coronation. Sir Henry was succeeded by his brother, Rev. John Dymoke, and he by his son, Henry Lionel Dymoke, whom Francis Seaman Dymoke, just deceased, succeeded in 1875. The present "champion" is his only son, also named Francis Seaman Dymoke.
