WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Random Observations and Local Events of Lesser Magnitude.

Rev. J. J. Kern of Portland is visiting Rev. L. Gray.

By existing arrangements with the publishers of the Weekly Oregonian, we are enabled to club that excellent paper with the Twice-a-Week CHRONICLE at the low rate of $2.25 per year. Now is the time to send in your names.

The Salvation Army will celebrate the third anniversary of its establishment in The Dalles Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Major Marshall of Chicago will speak on the army work Thursday evening at the Baldwin Opera House at 8 o'clock.

One of the features of the parade at Walla Walla today upon the occasion of the speaking of Hon. W. J. Bryan was sixteen white horses forming a hollow square around the carriage bearing that gentleman, and one old-gold colored accompanying them.

Sumpter reminds one of the good old mining camp days. On a recent visit there the writer saw a game of poker going on in a saloon where there were not less than $800 on the table, and it was a three-handed game, too. The Sumpter News mentions the fact that this same saloon took in on the 5th of July $1010.

The weather bureau says that the weather tomorrow will be fair, but ventures no opinion concerning the temperature. It is such valuable information as this that makes one rise up and thank God that he lives in a country where even the most ignorant need not despair of finally being rewarded with a permanent appointment.

D. C. Ireland, the genial editor of the Moro Observer, came in from Sherman county on the train and went to Portland on the Dalles City this morning. He says everything looks prosperous in Sherman, and that the wheat crop is something really wonderful. He insists that there are fields that will yield sixty bushels to the acre.

Mr. Landers telephoned in from A. S. Bennett's farm this morning that there was a man with a mask on at that place dodging about among the trees and acting queerly. Sheriff Driver took a man with him and drove out about 10 o'clock. The man left before his arrival, and this afternoon was seen a couple of miles up the creek with the sheriff hot on his trail.

W. S. Burleigh has sold the Aurora, of Enterprise, to Ed. A. Pollock, editor of the Joseph Herald, who will consolidate it with his paper. Both are populist papers. The Aurora was an unprofitable enterprise. Wallawa county now has but two papers—the Chieftain, published at Enterprise, and the Herald, of Joseph, the former republican in politics, the latter populist.

An exchange says: When a bicycle rider tries to see how close he can pass without striking you, the best thing to do is to stop and stand still until he has passed. With all due respect for the brother, we think he is mistaken; the proper thing to do is to swat the datted fool with anything that is handy to swat with. If nothing else is handy, use your fists, but don't fail to swat.

Coroner Butts was informed by telephone from Cloud Cap Inn yesterday evening that a man had been found dead near the inn, and that his services were required. The wires were working badly and Mr. Butts was unable to get the particulars, but understood that the dead man had been at the inn, that he was "flighty," and that he had wandered off in the timber and died.

Owing to the fact that the Catholics will lay the corner stone of their church Sunday, the 25th, and in order that the public may all have an opportunity of attending both ceremonies, the laying of the corner stone of the Lutheran church will take place Sunday next. Revs. Joseph DeForest, W. C. Curtis and L. Gray will officiate, and the Congregational choir will furnish the music.

The passengers on a Chester trolley car were very much amused yesterday by a conversation between two colored men, one of whom was a deacon in a down-town church. He introduced the subject of a new fence around a graveyard, and asked his companion, who had more worldly inclinations, for a contribution for that purpose. His reply was: "What yo' want a fence 'round dat graveyard fo'?" Live pussons doan' want to git in, and I'm doggone sure de dead ones ain't a-gwine to try an' git out. I ain't got no money foh graveyard fences." And the argument was clinched right there.—Philadelphia Record.

A Swift Sequel.

Yesterday we noted that George Aleck was married, we also stated that George had kleptomania and other things as bad. Now it seems that our diagnosis of George's qualities was eminently correct, for though yesterday was April-fool day for him, and a blushing bride as Virgil puts it, pendet colla, he could not it seems, resist his inclination to combine business with pleasure, and he is charged with having stolen five pistols, revolvers, rifled-cannon, galling guns or something of that kind from Arbuckle, who keeps the second-hand store. This morning Arbuckle missed his arsenal and remembered that George had been around yesterday trying to buy them. This coupled with George's reputation caused suspicion to fall on him, and Deputy Sheriff Olinger, of Hood River was telephoned to, to arrest him, which was probably done today. It may be possible that George is innocent, or at least that the stolen property may not be found and the proof lacking, but it is quite likely that George will again languish in the county jail next door to the room where only yesterday he took unto himself a bride.

BRYAN VISITS US.

He Good-Naturedly Gets Out of Bed,
But is Too Tired to Talk.

There was a crowd of about 600 or 700 people at the depot at 12:30 this morning for the purpose of seeing and hearing the Hon. W. J. Bryan. It was a good natured crowd, each anxious to see the great American advocate of the double standard, and hoping and expecting to hear him speak. When the train came to a stop the crowd gathered around the rear platform, and Mr. Bryan stepped out. In the gloom it was at first almost impossible to recognize him, and F. A. E. Starr, who accompanied him, stepped out and said: "Gentlemen, this is Mr. Bryan." Then he received an ovation. He did not speak, explaining that he was worn out and could not do so, but his remarks were heartily cheered, and everybody pressed forward to shake his hand. He looked tired, sleepy and worn out, and it was really asking a great deal in routing him out of his bed at that time, especially when it is remembered that he had made five speeches the day before, talking 8 hours. As the train pulled out he was given a hearty parting cheer, and the visit of Bryan to The Dalles was over.

The Teachers' Institute.

THE DALLES, July 13, 1897.

EDITOR CHRONICLE:

Learning by study must be won;
'Twas ne'er entailed from son to son.

As long ago as 1886 the advisability of holding one month's normal institute in Wasco county was discussed by the officers of the teachers' reading circle at that time. How to raise the requisite funds to pay instructors was the difficulty, some proposing to ask the county court to support it from the county funds. We believe, however, that the month's work done last year was the first of that length, and the good results of it have been observed all over the county. Again this year the teachers and others have responded to the call of the superintendent to pay each a fee of two dollars and fifty cents to make up the deficit in the institute fund. This is all the more commendable when it is taken into consideration that the average amount of salary paid male and female teachers is materially less than last year, besides having shorter terms. Low wages, however, do not indicate a lack of interest on the part of school patrons, as will be seen by the generous statistics of the last annual report, which shows 3983 persons between 4 and 20 years of age residing in the county, with an enrollment of 2592, and an average daily attendance of 1779. Besides there were eight private schools, having an enrollment of 159 pupils. It will be seen that the percentage of attendance would be greater had we statistics of the number of pupils between the ages of 6 and 20 years, instead of 4 and 20. In the sparsely settled districts many have far to go to school.

There were 98 teachers employed in the public schools during the year ending the first Monday in March, 1897, of whom fifteen held first grade, twenty-

Meyer-Viera.

Mr. Leopold Meyer and Mrs. Bertha Viera were married last evening at the bride's residence in this city, Rev. L. Gray performing the ceremony.

Not long after the two were made one they were treated to such a charivari as is seldom presented to anyone. There were young folks and old, big cans and little, noises great, noises small, noises varied, mixed, discordant, soul-rending. After this serenade had been kept up for some time, Mr. Meyer surrendered and served refreshments to the crowd, its members being mostly his best friends. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer left on the early morning train for Portland and will be absent for a week or more.

MARRIED.

At the residence bride's parents, near Boyd, Sunday, July 11th, Joseph W. McConnell to Miss Mattie E. Decker, Justice C. Sumner Smith performing the ceremony.
