All Such Will Hasten to See These.

It is a fact well worth remembering that the shrewdest, more practical Lady buyers of this city, do all or a large portion of their buying here. They say it's because they find larger stocks to select from, newer patterns, and closer prices on FIRST CLASS GOODS.

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Random Observations and Local Events of Lesser Magnitude.

A carload of cattle was shipped by Mr. Grimes to Troutdale this morning.

A dispatch from Geo. Herbert at La Grande says fully 5000 people listened to Bryan at that point this morning, and that there was great enthusiasm.

This was ladies' day at the Umatilla House alleys, they having possession from 9 to 12. They were all delighted with the alleys, though the largest score made was 36.

The ladies of the Christian church will give a lawn social on Friday evening, July 16th, at the residence of Mrs. James in the old Gilhousen place. Ice cream and cake 10 cents.

The sheriff Monday sold the e $\frac{1}{2}$  ne $\frac{1}{4}$ , sw $\frac{1}{4}$  ne $\frac{1}{4}$ , and lot 1, sec 10, tp 1 s of r 14e, to satisfy a judgment. The property was purchased by W. J. Cesar, who paid \$875 therefor.

The Columbia Southern is pushing work rapidly, and intend having the road completed in time to move the big grain crop. Superintendent Lytle goes out tomorrow to pay off the laborers. The first engine is on the road and is expected some time next week.

A whole carload of pianos and organs are on exhibition at the Jacobsen Book & Music Co.'s store, and will be sold at bed rock prices, on terms to suit purchaser. For one week only in order to reduce stock, we will make it an object for you to purchase now. Call and get our prices at once.

The great Christian Endeavor meeting at San Francisco, the greatest of the kind ever held, is over and the vast army of visitors is now scattering to the points from whence it came. Trains are leaving San Francisco every half hour, and many of them will make the return trip by the Oregon route.

The Chinamen arrested for allowing their fish wheels to run on Sunday had their trial before Justice Filloon and a jury yesterday afternoon and were acquitted. We have heard some criticisms of the verdict to the effect that the proof was plain and the verdict unaccountable, but know nothing of the matter personally.

Claude Gordion, while hauling brick in a wheelbarrow up an inclined plane at the Catholic church this morning, lost his balance and fell, wheelbarrow, brick and all to the ground, a distance of nearly fifty feet. He received a cut on the side of his head four or five inches long, but escaped otherwise uninjured.

Quite a band of Gypsies crossed the mountains recently by the Barlow route and are headed this way. They are of no benefit to any community, and the authorities will keep them moving. Our citizens will do well to give them no encouragement in any way, and at the same time look closely after their chicken coops and clothes lines.

One of the leading wool buyers estimates that about 2,500,000 pounds of wool have changed hands here to date, and that this week the purchases have been large. George A. Young today sold his clip, amounting to over 60,000 lbs., at 12 cents. There are 5,000,000 pounds more to be sold, and when all this is turned into money it ought to make a sum large enough to be felt in business.

Mr. William Sheffield, city editor of the Seattle Times, came up from Portland last night to visit his mother, returning this morning. He is a Dalles boy, having learned the printing trade here in the old Wasco Sun office. He went to the sound about 9 years ago, and at once began to push his way to the front in his chosen profession, newspaper writing. Being a Dalles boy he was bound to succeed, and is recognized as one of the brightest newspaper men in our neighboring state.

Sam Parrish Dead.

Samuel B. Parrish, ex-chief of police of Portland, died at St. Vincent's hospital Monday afternoon, aged 59 years.

Fifty-nine years is not a long life, as lives are measured in these days, and at 59 a man is not old. Yet the 59 years of Sam Parrish's life, measured by their generous actions, their good deeds, their love of his fellow man, cover a period longer, much longer than is vouchsafed most men to live. Measured by the acts of his generous right hand, that only now upon the other shore the left may learn; the sorrow he has stilled, the hopeless to whom he has given hope, the poverty from which he has plucked the sting, the tears of distress that his princely hand turned to those of joy, he died old and full of years. He had his faults, for he was human; but when the angel of death put fingers on his lips to seal them forever, a brave, a gentle, a generous and a manly heart ceased to beat.

Coming around the Horn to Oregon when but 2 years old, his earliest recollections were of Oregon. Among the big-hearted, broad minded, sturdy pioneers, whose hearts as their doors were ever open to each other, his character was formed, and in that noble forest of grand characters his, too, reached upwards, turning towards the sunlight, a noble stem. He had a girl's sentiment, a woman's tenderness, a boy's heart, a prince's hand. His friends he fastened to him with hooks of steel, and his enemies—for such he had—today can lift their hats and say, "There cracked a noble heart." These be not idle words of sentiment, or even fulsome praise of the dead. Living we could but think thus of our old friend, but dead we are permitted at least to mention a few of his many good qualities. Light rest the turf above you, Sam, and so good bye, until we meet again.

SWEPT TO HIS DEATH.

Frederick Kirn Caught By an Avalanche on Mount Hood.

Frederick Kirn, an Albina groceryman, met a fearful death on Newton Clarke glacier, on the north slope of Mount Hood, yesterday afternoon. In the ascent of the mountain he strayed from the path and was caught by a mass of sliding rock, which carried him 300 feet down the steep side of the mountain to the brink of a cliff, over which his body was plunged to the rocks, 400 feet below.

Kirn left Portland late last week, and reached Cloud Cap Inn Sunday afternoon, coming on foot from Hood River. In the afternoon he asked Mr. W. A. Langille, of the inn, several questions about the ascent of the mountain, declaring his intention to make it the following day. He declined the services of a guide. He had examined the road with his field glasses, he said, and would have no difficulty in following it all the way.

He retired early and arose yesterday morning at 4 o'clock, drinking a cup of coffee before he started on the climb, which he did at 4:30, all alone.

When at 5:30 yesterday afternoon Kirn did not return, Mr. Langille became alarmed for his safety, and started in search of him. He soon found that he had good cause for his alarm. Kirn's trail could be easily followed to within 700 feet of the summit. At this point it varies from the regular trail, which it had thus far followed, and led away to a treacherous, rock-covered district near the head of Newton Clarke glacier. Here Mr. Langille discovered to his horror that the unfortunate man had been caught in a mass of sliding rock, which he had probably loosened with his feet, and had been carried with it swiftly to the brow of a precipice below, over which the furrows made in the snow by the small avalanche disappeared. Working his way cautiously, and with the skill of the veteran mountaineer that he is, to the edge of the cliff, Mr. Langille saw the body lying among the loose rock far below at the mouth of the glacier. Kirn's death had been swift and terrible.

It was then 8:30 and growing rapidly dark. Mr. Langille, being all alone, could not bring the body back to the inn, and after nightfall would have had to take desperate chances even to reach it. Had there been any chance of the man's being alive, he would have taken the latter course, but no one could have survived such a fall an instant.

He therefore returned to the inn and telephoned the news to the police station. Captain Barclay, who was on watch when the message came in, at once dispatched Patrolman Velguth to Kirn's residence, 853 Albina avenue, to acquaint his family with his fearful fate. The officer found Kirn's wife and daughter, who at first refused to believe the news. When they fully realized it, they were prostrated with grief. C. R. Rieger, of the undertaking firm of Finley & Rieger, who was the son-in-law of the victim of the accident, was also notified. He will leave for Hood River today, and bring the body back to Portland.

Kirn had lived in Portland a long time, and was very well known. He was well advanced in years, but was vigorous and healthy. He left Portland expecting to make the ascent of the mountain Sunday and to return early in the week. He little knew what a fate was in store for him.—Oregonian.

The Teachers' Institute.

THE DALLES, July 14, 1897.

EDITOR CHRONICLE:

The cool weather was very favorable for the institute work yesterday.

After singing, the roll call showed three new names, Nellie Hudson, Dufur, W. H. Walker, Wamic, Maggie Merrill, Moro. Salina Phirman's name was omitted in the former list. Grace Smith of Kansas is visiting the institute.

The estate teachers' reading circle is now conducted by the state university, and has adopted Matthew's American Literature and White's Elements of Pedagogy as the text books, which are also used at the institute. This will materially benefit those who wish to pass the examination and receive a diploma.

In the general discussion today on "Preparation of the Teacher" the idea that anybody can teach was considered too low a standard, while the ideal teacher is not always attainable. All agree, however, that before entering upon the direct work of teaching, the following preliminaries demand attention:

First, the teacher needs to have a thorough knowledge of the branches to be taught as well as a fair knowledge of the cognate branches. Efficiency in Algebra and Geometry aids in teaching Arithmetic.

Second, one of the most important lessons that the teacher must learn is self-control. If he does not possess this he is like anything else that is untrained, like a troublesome child.

Third, study of the nature of the child and the principles of mental development.

Fourth, daily preparation for the work. Teaching is the art of human development. The teacher needs to review, observe, read, think, practice.

Fifth, self culture and association of teachers for mutual exchange of ideas. The cheerfulness, the vigor, the versatility and the endurance essential to success can come only of good health.
