A MORIBUND CITY.
 Portland people are urging each other to do something towards securing a share of the Alaska trade, and kicking each other because that other does not do the said something. We realize the natural advantages Portland has, and we understand the calamities in the shape of her own business men, with which she has to contend.
 Portland will not control the Alaska trade, or any part of it, for to do so she would have to become progressive. Unfortunately, Portland is so happily situated that for the first thirty years or more of her existence she did not have to reach out for trade. Everything came to her, and her business men sat in their offices and levied tribute on the balance of the country. That time has passed, and she has vigorous rivals. Seattle merchants are selling goods that Portland should sell all through Eastern Oregon; and, worse yet, all through the Willamette valley.
 Portland is not reaching out for trade, but is sitting with folded hands, her business stagnant, while her more energetic neighbors are taking from her "even that which she hath." Portland is the deadest town on the coast, and yet one of the richest.

IS IT CORRECT?

They who think that silver may rise as a result of the great output of gold in Alaska overlook the fact that increase in the total supply of money diminishes the demand for that which is least desirable. When there is gold enough for the monetary uses of all nations, none will use silver, and it will have only commodity value. As that condition approximates, its price will fall, and every addition to the stock of gold will send it lower. The South African gold discoveries sent down the price of silver, and those in Alaska will have the same effect.—Oregonian.

This being accepted as true, will our contemporary explain why silver went to a premium of about two per cent when the California gold fields were struck? And suppose, for instance, (which is only supposition) that gold should be found in such abundance that silver would become the scarcer metal, which would be the more valuable? It is a plain proposition that if gold becomes plentiful enough, it will cease to be a precious metal. Does it not follow, then, that anything tending to make the amount of gold as compared to silver greater, also tends to enhance the value of the silver?

Whatever is worth having is worth fighting for. The Dalles, owing to its situation, has always commanded a good trade; but its supremacy is attacked. That attack it must meet. The railroad through Sherman county will not affect trade much for a year or two, but in time, especially if it is extended south ten or twenty miles from Wasco, it will do more or less injury to our trade. We do not pretend to say that a railroad up the Deschutes will prevent this, for we do not know the country through which it runs, nor are we familiar with the circumstances or situation under which the proposed road would have to seek its patronage. That may, or may not, prove the solution of the problem; but at least it is worth examining into. It is proposed to have a survey made, but it strikes us the first thing to do is to study into the topography of the country the other side of the Deschutes, and find out if with the railroad built it will command the wheat shipments, or continue to control the wool trade. If it will, the road should be built; if not, not. The Dalles has the money to build the road; the only question is as to the amount of benefit to be derived. That should be looked into, and that at once.

The stock market is the surest measure of the actual effect of legislation upon the interest of the sugar trust. Judged by this test, the conference committee's schedule is distinctly favorable to the trust. When the Dingley bill went to the senate, sugar certificates were selling at 115. When the bill came out of the senate caucus, they were selling at 125. When the bill went into the hands of the conference committee certificates were selling at 129. Since the bill has been in conference the price has advanced to 137½. There was a decline from this point last week, but yesterday upon publication of the conference agreement the stock sold up to 141½. Here is an advance of $26½ on every share since the Dingley bill passed the house. It is clear that somebody thinks the conference report better for the trust than the house bill.—Oregonian.

The house attended to business Monday, passing the tariff bill in record-breaking time. The venerable relics of hygone days who drone away the summer days in stilted phrase and senseless debate, and who are known as senators, will probably fool away a week or more in their metaphysical discussions.

Of the 190,000 applicants for appointment to office, not one, so far as is known, has yet caught the Clondyke fever.

 What use is there in eating when food does you no good—in fact, when it does you more harm than good, for such is the case if it is not digested? If you have a loathing for food there is no use of forcing it down, for it will not be digested. You must restore the digestive organs to their natural strength and cause the food to be digested, when an appetite will come, and with it a relish for food.
 The tired, languid feeling will give place to vigor and energy; then you will put flesh on your bones and become strong. The Shaker Digestive Cordial as made by the Mount Lebanon Shakers contains food already digested and is a digester of foods as well. Its action is prompt and its effects permanent.

Doctors prescribe LAXOL because it has all the virtues of Castor Oil and is palatable.
