THE FUR-SEAL FARCE.

It would be amusing, if it were not disgusting, to study the actions of the United States government over the fur seals of Behring Sea. It is a source of perpetual turmoil between this government and England, and on one or two occasions has almost led to war. The whole cry is, "We must protect the seals or they will become extinct." The truth is, the government has protected the seals by turning them over to the tender mercies of a corporation, the corporation paying, or rather agreeing to pay, a stated sum for the privilege of exterminating them. No American citizen is allowed to kill a seal, that is none except the employees of this company.

It is bad enough that this state of affairs exists; but when on top of it the company refuses, and has refused and neglected to pay the nominal sum charged it ever since 1892, while at the same time it is urging the government, and successfully, too, to quarrel with England over the seals, the whole affair becomes nauseating.

The best thing that can be done is to let the seals go, let everybody have a chance at them, and let them be exterminated and the everlasting subject of dispute along with them. It costs the government more to police, unsuccessfully, the Behring Sea than all the furs are worth. Let England once understand that we will stand in and assist in exterminating the seals, and she will be too willing to assist in protecting them. London is the only place where the skins are dressed, and the only place where any money is made out of the industry, except that made by the legalized pirates of the North sea, the Alaska Commercial Company.

The race for the Clondyke is like the uprising of a great army of volunteers. There is the same casting off of comfort on the part of those that go, the same trial of patient waiting for loving ones left behind. And it is by such hardship and such tribulation that men and women are made. It is not even necessary that we should live if the price of existence is to be discontent with our lot and a constant grumble at fate. Better that a man should struggle with the cold and hunger of an Arctic winter than to embitter his own and others' lives with ceaseless complaining. Better that a community should be lifted out of a rut of gloom and repining even by tragedies such as are in store in the Yukon's wilds, than that it should forever languish in inaction and bitter self accusation. Someone has blessed the Clondyke because some new Bret Harte will celebrate its comedy and tragedy. But the real blessing lies in the fact that it will make men, who are the source of all literature; that it will put flesh on your bones and become strong. The Shaker Digestive Cordial as made by the Mount Lebanon Shakers contains food already digested and is a digester of foods as well. Its action is prompt and its effects permanent.

The tired, languid feeling will give place to vigor and energy; then you will put flesh on your bones and become strong. the whole of the United States east of the Mississippi, and it will take years to prospect it. The gold has been there some thousands of years, and it is not at all likely that any of it will run away this winter, and those who go in in the spring will have just as good chances as those who let their greed blind their judgment and endure the rigors of an Alaskan winter.

One of the amusing features of the Clondyke strike is the claim of W. J. Arkell to the whole region, because three years ago he and some other fellow made a map of the country, and the other chap staked out some claims on the Clondyke. Afterwards this same man went down to Africa to make a map of a part of that country, and presumably claim all he could draw a picture of. When one draws a mental picture of the brawny-bearded fellows on the Clondyke, who after infinite toil and hardship have secured their little claims and are working them, and that other picture of a fellow with a lead pencil and a map, at present in New York City, it does not take long to realize how ethereal the chances are of his getting any of it. On the Clondyke miners' laws prevail. There are no high-priced attorneys, no venal judges, and if Arkell will go up there to try his rights, he will get discouraged.

What use is there in eating when food does you no good—in fact, when it does you more harm than good, for such is the case if it is not digested?

If you have a loathing for food there is no use of forcing it down, for it will not be digested. You must restore the digestive organs to their natural strength and cause the food to be digested, when an appetite will come, and with it a relish for food.

Doctors prescribe Laxol because it has all the virtues of Castor Oil and is palatable.
