PERSONAL MENTION.

Miss Alma Schmidt arrived home from a camping trip down the river yesterday.

L. J. Norman went down to Wind river this morning to bring his daughter Mollie home. She is quite sick.

Miss Cora Aldrich, who stopped here for a visit on her way home from San Francisco, leaves tonight for Roseland.

Mrs. Chas. Stubling and daughter arrived home last night on the Regulator from a camping trip at Stevensen.

Mrs. Joles, Mrs. Randall, Miss Alden and Miss Lizzie Schoelling, who have been camping at Wind river, arrived home last night.

Leslie Butler and wife went to Portland this morning, and will leave that place on the Elder tonight, bound for Juneau and Sitka.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Michell and the young ladies who accompanied them on a trip to Mt. Hood, arrived home last night. The party had a splendid time and all are perfectly delighted with their trip. The girls amused themselves by sliding down the snow banks, and all came home with complexions like a second-hand saddle.

STRONG OF WING.

Birds Are Able to Inhibit Quite Serious Injuries Even Upon Man.

There are a good many birds whose strength of wing is sufficient to strike pretty hard blows, capable of bewildering a man, if several of the birds at-tacked him at once. Some birds depend on their wings as weapons to be used in the duels for sweethearts.

Forest and Stream told some years ago about an owl whose wing was broken by a dove it had sought to capture and make a meal of.

A correspondent of the National Druggist tells of his first surgical case in the state of Arkansas. A market hunter on Swan lake, near Shawnee Village plantation, was hunting at night with a light, when a band of swans, bewildered by the fire, came flying that way. The hunter, who was in a little prigue, threw up his arms to save his head, and the left one was struck by the wing of a bird, and both the ulna and the radius of his forearm were broken.

The Sun recently told of a Port Jer-vis farmer who was knocked from a tree by a flight of wild geese during a fog, and Forest and Stream has several times in the past 20 years told about men who were dazed by birds flying against their heads, partridges (ruffed grouse) being the principal offenders.

Coldest Winter in New England.

The most memorable winter in New England of which we have a clear record was that of 1740-41, says a cor-respondent of the Stonington (Conn.) Mirror. Then people passed and re-passed from Providence to Newport on the ice, and from the shores of Con-necticut to Montauk Point. One re-cord says that a man drove a horse and sleigh from Hurlgate, near New York, to Cape Cod. A sleighing party went from Norwich to Fisher's island on the ice the same year. In the winter of 1857 the boats en route for New York were icebound near Hart's island for 19 days, and for three weeks the mercury kept in the neighborhood of zero.

"Last summer one of our grand-children was sick with a severe bowel trouble," says Mrs. E. G. Gregory, of Fredericktown, Mo. "Our doctor's remedy had failed, then we tried Cham-berlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which gave very speedy relief." For sale by Blakeley and Houghton.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, can be taken as easily in summer as in winter. Unlike the plain oil it is palatable, and the hypophosphites that are in it aid in digestion and at the same time tone up the system.

For sickly, delicate children, and for those whose lungs are affected, it is a mistake to leave it off in the summer months. The dose may be reduced if necessary.

We recommend the small size especially for summer use, and for children, where a smaller dose is required. It should be kept in a cool place after it is once opened.

For sale by all druggists at 50c. and $1.00.

THE HUNGARIAN LANGUAGE.

It is in No Way Related to the Ger-man.

I utterly fail to see where English-men have received the impression that the Hungarian language is a sort of underling dialect of German, says a writer in Nineteenth Century. Ger-man and English, as is well known, are Aryan languages. Hungarian is no Aryan language at all. Its very char-acter is opposed to that of the German idiom. If German or English may fairly be compared to a tree, the branches and fruits of which are in-deed visible, the roots of which, how-ever, are underground and hidden away, the Hungarian language is like a tree the roots of which are almost visible, and by a kind of linguistic Roentgen-photography we can almost watch the sap of the roots rising into the stem and branches. It is, in other words, agglutinative.

The first syllable of each word repre-sents the root of the word; tenses or pronouns are soldered on to the root. It is originally the language of nomad and roving tribes anxiously clinging to their word roots for fear of losing all means of understanding one another. Of German words in Hungarian there is only a handful, and they are used mostly as clovis and jestmakers. In the courtly avenues of Hungarian sen-tences. The Hungarians do not detest the Germans, but they do not like them either. The German, known to the Magyars chiefly in his Austrian man-ifestation, does not appear a model worth imitating. The Austrian is pol-ite, amiable, industrious, but, before anything else, pleasure-loving.

A Phenomenal Rainfall.

The most phenomenal rainfall recorded in the annals of Ohio took place on the 12th day of August, 1861. Mr. S. B. McMillan, who gives an account of this remarkable downpour, says that it ex-tended over an area of at least 100 square miles. The total amount of water which fell during the 11 hours of precipitation was 8 1/2 inches, and of that quantity 4.3 inches fell in 4 1/2 hours. What is meant by a fall of 8 1/2 inches of rain in so short a space of time will be better under-stood when the reader is informed that one inch of rain means 22,000 gallons to the acre. This immense quantity of water will weigh 220,000 pounds, or 109 tons!

KIPLING'S SNAKE.

Showing the Force of an Ill-Ordered Im-agination.

A writer in McClure's Magazine tells how he edited a paper in India with the help of Rudyard Kipling, and he men-tions as a side issue a peril from snakes which Kipling once underwent. The danger of snakes in Lahore was real enough, and the place was rich in scorpions. The person who tells the story had been stung by a scorpion in bed one morning, and Kipling aided him in the afternoon in a scorpion hunt. They found 26 under the matting in the ver-anda outside the bedroom door, beside a few centipedes, and put the lot into a large tumbler, and filled it up with whisky.

One day, when we were dressing in the morning, I heard Kipling shouting, and went into his room. His face was pale with horror, and he was tightly clasping one leg above the knee.

"There's a snake," he gasped, "inside my trousers, and I think I've got him by the head. Put your hand up from below and drag him out."

I observed that Kipling only "thought" he had it by the head, and that really it had might be at the other end, in which case—but before I had finished, I saw the horror in his face relax and give place to a puzzled look succeeded by fits of laughter. Endeavoring to as-certain by the sense of touch whether it was the head he was grasping, he had discovered that it did not really feel like any part of a snake at all. In fact it had a buckle, and he realized that his braces had been dangling inside the garment when he put it on.

An Emblem of Love.

The aenacia has for a long time been regarded in the east as the emblem of concealed love. The notion is purely fanciful, for there is nothing about the plant to suggest the idea.

A VALUABLE RAT, THIS.

Keeps the House Free of Mice and Plays the Violin Nicely.

It is a well-known fact that rats and mice do not infest a house at the same time. Working upon this hint as to the nature of rodents, N. K. Laureson, of Vicksburg, has adopted a scheme by which he keeps himself rid of both pests. This he accomplishes, says the Philadelphia Times, by capturing a young rat and training him to catch mice. This singular mouser, whose name, by the way, is Czar, is doubtless the most successful one on record. He has been taught to pounce upon a mouse on short order, without fear and without favor, and he shows no mercy. Of course, he can follow the mice into close quarters, and never has been known to lose his quarry. Strange to relate, large rats have given the house the go-by also, seeming to under-stand that the place belongs to Czar, and that there must be no encroach-ment upon his prerogative.

Laureson is very fond of his queer pet, and has taught him many interest-ing tricks. Among others he has trained him to handle a bow, and with a miniature violin Czar manages to scrape the strings in a way that is not unmusical. Of course it has been im-possible to teach him really to play a piece, but sitting up on his hind legs, with his fiddle grasped in his tiny claws, Czar produces a sort of half-screaming sound that is altogether weird and fantastic. Laureson is himself a vio-linist of no mean order, and Czar likes nothing better than to sit on his mas-ter's knee and listen to his playing.
