Even the United States government has grown wild on the Clondyke, and will send a warship to convey the steamer Portland from the Yukon. The owners of the Portland have represented to the government that Chinese pirates have concocted a plot to capture the Portland with her alleged cargo of $2,000,000 worth of gold, and the official suckers at Washington have taken the bait. It is true that the Chinese at one time knew more about the sailing dates of the Portland than anyone except the owners of the old smuggler; but it is preposterous to even presume that the Chinese pirates know anything about the discovery of the Clondyke. Mr. Wear has succeeded in getting a further advertisement of his transportation line, for which the government, no doubt, has his sincere thanks.

The correspondent of the East Oregonian, on his way to Alaska, writes that paper from Astoria, and shows his fitness for the position by saying in closing his letter: "Late reports are to the effect that no one is safe unless he has enough for one year. He must also have a familiarity with boating on mountain streams. The passage over the Dyea route is extremely dangerous." As the newspapers of the coast have been filled with these statements since the beginning of the excitement, one is forced into admiration of the perspicacity of the correspondent who caught on so readily. We really think he has missed his calling, for in the realms of ancient history he would prove a bright and shining light.

The grand total made by trifles is something astounding when one begins to make calculations concerning them. For instance, there are 75,000,000 people in the United States. The expenditure by each of these persons of one cent would make the snug sum of $750,000. Basing its calculations on this fact, the New Orleans Picayune makes some estimates as to what causes hard times. It will be seen from the above that the curtailing of expenses, amounting to five cents a day, by each person in the United States, would stop the expenditure of $1,369,750,000. This alone taken from the volume of business of the country would cause hard times.

Several of our exchanges note that harvest hands are scarce and wages higher on account of the Clondyke rush. As few of the grain-raising counties of Oregon have furnished more than a dozen Clondykers, and as most of these were men who never worked in the harvest fields, it is fair to presume that the corner grocery, where fabulous wealth may be talked about and wild day dreams indulged in, has a greater attraction for some people than the golden, but hot, grain fields. Of one thousand industrious men who stay at home and another thousand who go to the gold fields, the former collectively will have more money at the end of the year than the latter.

Mr. Scott, of the Oregonian, and Mr. D. P. Thompson are comparing records. Scott says Thompson was a director of the Portland Savings Bank when it broke, and asks that gentleman, while delivering his lectures on finance, to explain his theories of finance in connection therewith. Mr. Thompson denies being such director. Mr. Thompson charges Mr. Scott with being a director of the Oregon National Bank at the time it failed. Scott denies being such director. Each has invited the other to "produce the books." Honors seem to be easy.

"Jimmy the Diver," who returned to Tacoma from the Clondyke a week or two ago, is having a fine time with his money, and, if reports are true, will be ready to be grubstaked again long before spring. He amuses himself by giving away nuggets, and imagines the inexhaustible wealth of the Inca is his. Bret Harte describes the career of just such a character in the tale of "Milton Perkins, late an owner in White Pine."

When Governor Tanner of Illinois appeared in the parade at Chicago upon the unveiling of the Logan monument, he was greeted everywhere with hisses and cries of "Allen bill!" "Gas bill!" "Yerkes," etc. Chicago people think the governor sold out to the street-car and gas trusts. There is some hope for American institutions yet.

Fifty years ago the United States compelled Japan to open her ports to the world, and now Japan proposes to make the United States keep the ports of Hawaii open. Such are the changes time in its rounds brings.

COURIERS BACK NUMBERS.

No Longer Any Need to Go Through Europe with them.

Up to times within the memory of living men, almost no one of means traveled through Europe without a courier. Before good guide books were printed, he was almost indispensable. His tribe survives, writes Herbert Luce in Going Abroad, but in greatly diminished numbers. To the self-reliant traveler he is of no use whatever. Indeed, he is frequently a positive incumbrance, and worse. To my mind, one of the great pleasures of travel is in learning to travel by myself. There is satisfaction, pleasure and education in planning routes, deciphering time tables, making bargains, learning by observation the lay of the land.

The time may have been when a courier could save a traveler more than his cost. Most certainly that is not the case now. On the contrary, as he gets a percentage on every purchase his party makes (which, of course, comes out of the purchaser in increased price), and as it is often for his interest to advise the more costly route, the more costly hotel, or the more costly excursion, he eats up much more than his wages, while saving positively nothing. Bean declares that in a two weeks' trip in southern Spain, which he made side by side with a couple having a courier, he invariably reached the hotel first, got better rooms, saw all the sights to as good advantage; yet the courier was of his kind an expert. The fact is that travel has become so general, tourist companies, railroads and land-locks have so well studied its needs, books are so plentiful, that you couldn't very well get off the track or have a mishap if you tried.

Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have certain and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery.
