THE SHAME OF IT.

C. C. Garrett writes to the Spokesman Review concerning Mrs. M. J. Delaney, who started to Oregon in 1844 with her parents, both of whom died on the way. With her brothers and sisters she reached the Whitman station, and the whole lot were taken care of by him. She was captured at the Whitman massacre by the Indians and ransomed by the Hudson Bay Co. She is now poverty-stricken and crippled with rheumatism and resides at Farmington.

The story awakens sympathy and pity, not for her poverty nor for her crippled condition, for those things are of the common lot. The sting of the story lies in its tail, the concluding sentence being: "Does it not seem a shame that she must now, in her crippled old age, eat the bread of charity and become a burden on her children, who are barely able to care for their own families?" There lies, for her, the bitterness, that in her old age the hands that toiled until they could toil no more for her children, and that gave royally, must receive the begrudged gift of food from those who reaped the harvest of her bounty; that the lips that pressed the mother's kiss upon the baby lips must ask that baby grown to manhood for alms. Truly it is a shame; but the shame lies with those who think their mother a burden and permit her condition to become so grievous that the public is called upon to assist her.

While comfortably quartered on the deck of an ocean steamer, the refreshing breezes that gather inspiration as they sweep the silvery surface of Puget sound, cooling his extensive brow and toying with his sorrel locks, Joaquin Miller writes beautifully of the pleasures of Clondyke mining. He grows enthusiastic, eloquent and poetical as he describes the natural advantages offered by Northern Alaska—a run over the Chilcot, a float down the Yukon. Viewed from this position the Clondyke appears perfectly enchanting to the old poet. He is going to stroll over alone from Dyea, taking everything (including provisions) perfectly easy, and will jot down his experience each day for his syndicate articles. The letters descriptive of the journey in will no doubt be rosy-hued and romantic. The prose part will probably show up in the letters descriptive of the sojourn at the diggings and the journey out. If there is one thing more than another calculated to convince a man that "life is real, life is earnest," and put a saw-tooth edge on his poetic nature, we should imagine a winter in Clondyke on a dog meat diet to be the thing. It will be interesting to contrast the literary productions of Joaquin Miller with those of Joaquin Miller.—Pendleton Tribune.

The expected has happened at Dyea, and 3000 gold-seekers are encamped there waiting to get their goods packed over the mountains. That this was certain to be the case was plain to everyone who had not a coal oil can full of gold dust in each eye. Given 1600 pounds of stuff to be conveyed thirty-one miles by each person, the only means of transportation being a pack train of Indians, supplemented by the owner of the freight, and it is not difficult to reach the conclusion that the job is a big one. Not half so difficult, as to get the goods over the mountain. The result is as expected, many already discouraged are selling their outfits for anything they can get, and returning to civilization to do what they should have done at first, wait until spring. And still the rush continues as fast as rotten and long ago condemned old hulks can be resurrected to carry the madding crowd, and it will continue all winter if transportation to Dyea is provided.

The editor of the Eugene Guard confesses to not being farmer enough to know whether thirty-four grains of wheat in one head is a good yield or not. This confession is decidedly startling, but indicates that the profession is advancing, and leads one to hope that the time may come when the agricultural editor will cease his long dissertations about "The Best Way to Curry Hens," and his labored researches along the suggestive lines, "Plant Food Considered in Relation to Its Effect Upon Angora Goats." There are just a few things "we editors" don't know any old thing about, and one of the few is teaching a farmer how to farm.

We don't believe in the use of the "K" in spelling Clondyke, nor do we think the "i" preferable to the "y" in Klondyke. The "i" might be all right provided it begun with a "C," and was spelled Clondike; but as the department clerks at Washington know all about Indian names, and everything else pertaining to the Pacific coast, and as they have decided on K-l-o-n-d-i-k-e, Klondike, the latter will have to go. After all it doesn't matter much how it is spelled, for the worst spell in connection with it will be that the fellows on their way there will have.

Remarkable Cure of Chronic Diarrhoea. In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 187th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted chronic diarrhoea. It has given me great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write to me. Yours gratefully, Henry Steinberger, Allentown, Pa. Sold by Blakeley & Houghton.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy always affords prompt relief. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.
