FULL OF FAITH.

Three young men from New Hampshire, lured to Seattle by the fabulous stories of the Klondike, were buncoed out of $5,000 by Seattle sharpers a day or two ago on a story that a 5-year-old child should have seen through. The bunco men found that the young fellows had about $3,000 and that they wanted to go to the Klondike. This furnished the ground for the sharpers. One of them represented that he had just come from the gold fields with his partners; that they had a claim, No. 18, on Bonanza creek, worth $3,000,000, but that they would take the young fellows in as partners for $5,000. Not that they wanted the money, but simply because they wanted to know the men they took in were of the responsible kind. The young fellows telegraphed home for $3,000 more, and turned over $5,000 to the generous Klondikers who were selling them an interest in mines worth $100,000 for each $1,000 paid.

The young fellows have telegraphed home for money to pay their fares home, and state that they have seen all they care to of the wild, woolly and wicked West. It is just as well that they went broke before they got beyond the confines of civilization and out of the reach of aid from their relatives.

It is not probable that we are to finger much British gold on account of the wheat crop. That is, we are not to receive any extra amount from England. The crops there have been above the average, but of course England will have to buy, and to buy at the increased prices. The heavy crop shortages have been in Europe, France, Hungary and Russia. France will have to buy heavily instead of exporting, and Australia and the Argentine instead of exporting must import. The same is true of India. Hence, no matter how good crops England has, she must come into the world's markets to purchase what she needs. From present indications wheat will command a good price for two or three years. It will take more than average crops for two years to replace the world's shortage, and under average circumstances it will take five years to catch up with the shortage and create a surplus that will again force prices down.

Thomas Lewis of Farmington attempted to commit suicide a few days ago because a girl he was badly smitten with refused to respond to his wild waste waste of affection. This is one of the most insane follies of youth. Before they arrive at the age of discretion every beard-sprouter imagines that if he does not get some one especial divinity, the world has gone wrong, and, like Pyramus, he wants to go stabbing himself. He does not realize that Dame Fortune, who apportions things, is a kindly old soul, and does much for such blamed fools as himself. Puppy love is a necessity, sweet as treacle and just as sticky; but most of us recover by escaping; otherwise two souls are generally rendered miserable, and each wonders how the divine Klondike ever struck them.

An attempt is being made by the National Bar Association to have a uniform divorce law passed in all the states of the union. This should be done. Under the present laws the condition of divorced persons who marry again is a strange one. A man married in New York, for instance, and divorced, may not marry again for a given period. He may go over into Ohio and there marry legally. The marriage under the New York laws would be void; under the Ohio laws legal. The children of the marriage would in one state be considered legitimate; in the other not so, and in case of the death of the parents this might seriously affect the inheritance. There is no branch of the law that so badly needs being made uniform as the divorce law.

At the bullion rate the silver in a dollar is now worth less than forty cents. The price goes steadily down, and there really seems to be no limit at which this downward tendency must stop. The cost of production, except under most favorable circumstances, has already been passed, and the question is as to what will be done with silver coin. It is this very question that is principally responsible for the swift decline in prices. Fears are entertained that silver will become so cheap that it will be abandoned as a money metal, and if this were done and the thousands of tons of silver coin were thrown on the market, it would be practically valueless.

Arkansas is having a boom in the pearl industry. It has been discovered that the mussels with which Arkansas streams abound are loaded with pearls, and Arkansas people have all gone to wading in the streams hunting for them. Pearls have been found valued at $800. The scriptural comparison of casting pearls before swine may, or may not, have been fulfilled, according to how Arkansas citizens are sized up.

The Moro Observer promulgated a great truth when it said in its last issue, "In a short time the world will be divided into two great classes—those who are sorry they did not go to the Klondike and those who are sorry they did."
