AN OBJECT LESSON.

A dispatch from Minneapolis dated September 1st says:

There is to be a marked advance in the price of white pine lumber as a result of the advance in agricultural products. The list committee of the Mississippi Lumbermen's Association met today to agree on an advance to take effect next week.

It is quite proper that the lumbermen should share in the general prosperity, and we re-print the above only to call attention to the fact that the association controls the price, and says to the consumer: "After next week the price of lumber will be advanced so much per thousand." The association also controls the price it will pay its employes for their labor, but we failed to see anything in the dispatch saying that at the date named the wages of the association employes would be advanced a given per cent. This is a part of the proceedings that will not be in print because that part will not occur, and yet labor is entitled to share in the general prosperity also. When labor gets together, as the association did, and says after such a date our products shall bring such a price, that is a strike.

We do not believe in strikes, but we do believe that the toiler should have his share of high prices, just as he is forced to take his moiety of low prices.

ENGLAND'S AFGHAN TROUBLE.

There have been three British wars with Afghanistan during the Victorian sixty years, and the news from the Khyber Pass seems ominous of another.

One of the earliest military tragedies of the queen's reign was the appalling massacre of McNaghten's command in one of the passes leading southward from Cabul into India. Over 16,000 men, women and children, retreating from the Afghan capital under pledges of a peaceful journey to India, were overtaken in the pass by the ferocious tribesmen and massacred within a few hours. One man only survived the slaughter, and he, badly wounded, crawled slowly on to Jellalabad to tell the horrible story.

Remembering that mournful event, it is not surprising that England should be anxiously waiting for reassuring news from the disputed Khyber Pass.

A shrewd trader ought to make money at Dawson City buying provisions of one store and selling to another. Mr. Milton Misamore, who writes a very sensible letter from Dawson City under date of July 29th, after giving a very minute description of the trip in from Dyea, proceeds to give the prices at Dawson City, which are, all things considered, quite reasonable. He gives the market quotations as follows: Bacon 50 cents per pound; flour $24 per barrel, $6 per sack; granulated sugar 30 cents per pound; beans 13 cents; butter $1.50 per roll. Mr. R. H. Gerdes writes from Dawson City July 11th. He quotes flour at $62 per sack, or $248 by the barrel; bacon $1 a pound; potatoes $100 a sack. Between the two quotations, it strikes us a good sharp business man could make more than by mining. Flour that can be bought by one man for $6 a sack and costs another $62, furnishes an opportunity for trade, and even 50 cents a pound difference in the price of bacon is not bad for a sharp trader. The Klondike stories be strange ones, especially when yoked together.

The Pendleton Tribune takes up the cudgel to defend American courts from the imputation of putting less value on life than the English courts, and cites two English cases, in one of which a man was sentenced to six weeks hard labor for killing his wife, and on the other a pickpocket was sentenced to ten years for his small theft. We do not pretend to dispute the Tribune's authority, nor to justify all English decisions, but as far as the punishment of crime is concerned, England certainly has a better record than the United States. Anent the cases quoted, we might call attention to two Oregon cases. One was for murder, the other for stealing salmon, both tried before the same judge. The murderer got one year in the pen, and the fellow who swiped one salmon got two years in the same institution. And then there is Durrant, dying of old age in California. But the subject broadens too rapidly to permit discussion.

No mystery about it. When the Shakers offered some time ago to give away a bottle of their Digestive Cordial to any one who might call at their New York office, there was a great rush and a great many people thought they were crazy.

Subsequent events proved to have been a very clever advertising transaction, for although they gave away thousands of bottles, it was in the end profitable; nearly every one that took a free bottle came back for more and paid for it with pleasure, saying they had derived better results from its use than from any other medicine they had ever used.

There is nothing so uniformly successful in the treatment of stomach troubles as the Shaker Digestive Cordial, and what is better than all, it relieves at once.
