Port Townsend reports a violent thunder storm Tuesday, a very rare thing for this time of the year. A thunder storm generally does its own reporting.

The weather continues showery, but the rainfall is very light, not enough so far to do any damage, or even to stop threshing more than an hour or so.

On the wharfboat this morning was a large lot of lounges and furniture, which made it look like a parlor. It is the most elegantly furnished wharfboat in the Northwest.

Hard luck comes to all of us. The Hon. M. S. Quay of Pennsylvania has lost his railroad pass over the Pennsylvania and Fort Wayne railroad, but then he will perhaps be able to get another.

Cards were received in the city this morning announcing the marriage of Mr. Frank Garretson and Miss Annette Perkins at Winterset, Iowa. Frank is a former Dalles boy, and his friends here wish him well in his new relation in life.

The D. P. & A. N. are having two lockers put on the wharfboat for the benefit of the stewards. Supplies can thus be ordered a trip ahead, and when the boat arrives all that will have to be done is to open the locker and put the supplies on the boat.

Fruit has been shipped from Wenatchee at the rate of a carload a day for the last few weeks. The shipments consist mostly of tomatoes, pears, peaches, watermelons and apples. The marketing of tomatoes has ceased almost entirely at present, owing to depreciated prices, and, as a consequence, hundreds of bushels will rot on the vines, as the hot weather has ripened them very fast.

By the breaking of a bridge with a steam threshing outfit in Washington county Thursday morning, the engine and wagon were thrown into a ravine fifteen feet deep. Rufus H. Norman was killed instantly and a man named Harkins was badly scalded by escaping steam. The latter may recover.

Dan Murphy's United States district attorney term of office expired Tuesday. Should he see fit, Associate Justice Field, of the United States supreme court, may appoint a successor to Mr. Murphy, said appointee to hold office until the permanent officer selected by the president qualifies.

Messrs. McNair and Giles, of the Cline prospecting party that went into the Olympics in July, have come out. The party made five locations on mineral claims, and Mr. Cline, instead of accompanying the returning pilgrims, has gone in on another stream to prospect for mineral. Samples of the ore from the claims located were brought out for assay.

Dr. B. E. Fernow, chief of the forestry division at Washington, D. C., and A. J. Johnson of Portland, forestry collector, were in Albany Monday, on their way to Mount Jefferson and the headwaters of the North Santiam. They had just returned from a trip to Mt. Shasta, the Josephine county caves, and Crater lake, where they obtained many valuable specimens. Mr. Fernow is looking over the timber reserves of the West, and his trip to Santiam is for the purpose of acquainting himself with the value of the timber and the lands along the river, so as to report intelligently upon the question of restoring to settlement a strip of the reserve along the river and railroad. They will return in a few days and make a trip to Mount Hood, Blue mountains, and afterward the Rockies.

The Misses Taylor's School.

The select school for children will open September 13th. This school combines the Kindergarten with the primary studies. Poet for the year, Eugene Field. Recess time spent in playing the Kindergarten games. Session from 1 to 4 p. m. This is for children from 4 to 10 years of age. Private instruction given in higher branches.

"So that young man wants to marry you?" said Mable's father.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Do you know how much his salary is?"

"No. But it's an awfully strange coincidence."

"What do you mean?"

"Herbert asked the very same question about you."—Washington Star.

THE VERISCOPE LAST NIGHT.

A Wonderful Invention, That Puts Life Into the Inanimate.

The veriscope last night at the Vogt presented the Corbett-Fitzsimmons contest to a fair-sized audience, in a manner that pleased all. Outside of the subject of the photographs, the life-like pictures considered as a triumph of American genius, were well worth the money it cost to see them.

When it is taken into consideration that 143,000 distinct photographs were taken by the use of electrical appliances in fifty-two minutes, that these photographs were developed, and being placed in another electrical machine, are made to pass a given point at the rate of 2700 a minute, and that each photograph is stopped for an instant in front of the lens, and that too each within the one-hundredth part of an inch of the same spot, it may well be considered one of the most wonderful inventions of the age.

The pictures are very life-like and from the time the first one was thrown on the screen until the last one had disappeared, the profound silence in the big hall told the eloquent story of the absorbing interest the scenes awakened. We do not believe in prize fighting, but in the pictures the "manly art" seems robbed of its brutality. The science displayed, the grace and quickness of action could not fail to awaken admiration in anyone.

Corbett was particularly active and it hardly seemed possible that a person could dodge, advance and retreat as quickly as he did.

Fitzsimmons was somewhat slower, but his blows were tremendous.

Some doubted the pictures being accurate, that is, thought that the movements were in the pictures more rapid than in the real battle. This is not the case, as the pictures were put on the screens at the same speed they were taken into the machines, that is, three minutes to the round.

Mr. Wheelock, who explained the pictures between acts, is a very pleasant talker and interested the audience while new films were being put in place, it requiring four sets to show the fourteen rounds and the scenes at the end of the fight. Those who failed to go missed a treat.

"Gone to Chicago."

The Olympia Standard tells a good story on our Judge Caples, who is now on his way to Valparaiso, as follows:

"As a prosecutor the judge was a terror to evildoers, and though of Teutonic origin was at times given to unintentional perpetration of 'bills,' during the heat of debate, that were decidedly 'Irish' in character.

"One is related on the judge that is worthy of perpetuity among the memories of the Northwest bench and bar. The judge was engaged in the prosecution of a homicide case at Portland in the early '80s. The evidence against the accused was wholly circumstantial. Briefly, one brother was accused with the murder of another. It had been shown that the two brothers had been deer hunting on an island in the Willamette; that the dead man was possessed of a large amount of money. Weeks after the day of the outing the body of the murdered man was found on the island; search by detectives located the murderer in Victoria and in the possession of personal property known to have belonged to the deceased. When asked by the detectives where his brother was, the prisoner replied: 'He has gone to Chicago.' Judge Caples was closing the case to the jury. He had carefully reviewed all of the evidence and then turning pointed to the accused and said, in a voice of thunder: 'Gentlemen of the jury! Look at that man. Eighteen hundred years ago, in the Garden of Eden, one brother's hand was raised in murderous assault against another. As his victim lay bleeding and dead; when the voice of an offended deity demanded of that evil doer, Cain! Where is thy brother Able? The lie leaped to his lips as it did the lips of this defendant, and he replied, gentlemen of the jury, 'He has gone to Chicago.'"

J. B. Haverly Dangerously Hurt.

About ten days ago Tom McCoy and J. B. Haverly got into a quarrel, the merits of which we know nothing about, and during its course some pretty bad language was used, it is said, by Haverly. At any rate, later in the evening the parties met in a saloon and a fight ensued, in which Haverly was beaten over the head with a piece of billiard cue. At the time it was thought no serious damage was done, though Haverly had several scalp wounds, and next morning he asked us not to say anything about the matter, with which request we complied.

Since then, however, it has developed that the injuries were really of a serious nature, and last night word reached town that his skull was fractured and that there was little hope of his recovery.

Survey Completed.

Deputy Surveyor Campbell and party returned from the Locks Tuesday evening on the Regulator, having completed survey of the sections and subdivision lines of tp 2 n r 8 e, just south of that point. This township includes the forks of Herman creek, and source of one branch of Hood river in the southeast; the southwest corner reaches across Eagle creek, and the northwest corner reaches over the Columbia to Stevenson. It is well timbered in many localities and contains considerable arable land, destined some day to be brought under cultivation.

Mr. Campbell goes on today by team to complete surveys in the Wallowa and Harney countries, returning some time in November.

IN the United States now enjoying food cooked in the MAJESTIC affirm that the half has not been said in its praise. The manufacturers of this Range pledge themselves that all parts of the MAJESTIC except the firebox and the new series Nos. 201 to 212, are made of steel and malleable iron, and purchasers are assured that it is as good and as honest as skilled labor and money can produce. If the parts now in malleable iron were (as in other so-called steel ranges) made of cast iron, the price could be greatly reduced; but the MAJESTIC is not made with a view to furnishing extra parts for repairs.
