COST OF GETTING GOLD.

It costs ninety cents to produce every dollar's worth of gold mined in California last year. To be precise in figures, the value of the ore mined was $13,969,529 and the cost of getting it $12,506,555.

This statement is quoted from an article in the New York Mail and Express by a writer who evidently knew what he was writing about. And he produced other statistics corroborative of this paper's claim that gold mining is not all profit. It cost $3.05 in Alabama and $5.56 in Wyoming to produce a dollar of bullion from the mines. In Colorado the total mined was $23,000,000 in round numbers at a cost of $13,500,000, so that it cost fifty cents there to mine a dollar of bullion. In Montana the cost was forty-five cents. In 1890 the total gold and silver mined in this country was $99,283,752, and the capital invested was $486,323,338, or $4.90 of capital for every dollar of bullion produced. Putting it in another way, there was only twenty cents of bullion produced for every dollar of capital. The total expenditures in mining this sum was $63,451,136. The amount of expense per dollar of bullion gold and silver was 64 cents. More than 3000 mines produced less than $10,000 each. Only twenty-eight mines of the 6000 produced over a half a million each; fewer than fifty produced between $250,000 and $500,000. It is estimated that 1000 non-profit-producing mines were worked last year, and that there were 1266 idle or abandoned. California has now first place in gold production, but Colorado is close behind, and the two produce an aggregate of $27,000,000 of gold per year, California being about $1,000,000 ahead of Colorado. The total production now in this country averages about $35,000,000 a year, although last year the production was $46,610,000.

There is gold in Alaska and British Columbia—untold billions of it. But when the quantity taken out is compared with the cost of getting it out, the showing will carry with it more significance than attends the bare statement of the output.

The London Spectator says that the American politicians have insulted England. That if a man insults another once, he may ignore it, but the second time the only thing to do is to "knock him down." It then gravely goes on to intimate that if we "do it again," we will "get knocked down." Of course that may be possible, but England must remember that she has attempted the knocking down plan twice, with results not satisfactory to herself. She should remember, also, that in all her wars she has never yet, single handed, whipped a civilized nation. England has hit this country some pretty severe blows, and can and will continue to do so, but she never strikes above the pockets.

The Oregonian thinks the congressional delegation made a mistake in not making their recommendations with regard to the federal appointments in this state before they left Washington. This may possibly be true, but whether it is or not, at least by coming home the delegation had one advantage, and that is that it was enabled to consult with the Republican party through its leaders, nearly every prominent Republican in the state having called upon them. They must have a pretty good idea of whom the leaders of the party, at least, desire to see get the offices. There was no mistake about this.

It is Geer versus Patterson in the race for the collector of customs appointment in Portland, with the tall agriculturist in the lead. At Salem the fight has taken the shape of a petition in favor of Mr. Geer's appointment, and according to the returns, out of 126 business men to whom the petition was presented, 105 signed it, while of the twenty-one refusing, only four favored Patterson. The ramifications of a political squabble are as intricate and uncertain as quartz stringers in trap-rock. From present indications Mr. Geer will get into the official harness.

The mining situation in the East gives no sign of change, other than the offer on the part of the operators to concede part of the miners' demands. The latter, however, refuse to consider anything less than a 69-cent-a-ton rate. This the operators will not concede, and so the fight goes merrily on.

Silver is going down and lead is going up, being now higher than for several years. Wonder if those blasted gold bugs are not booming lead just as a slam at silver? It may be that the price of lead has been affected by Japan's abnormal appetite in desiring to swallow the Hawaiian islands and the Nicaragua canal.

Remarkable Cure of Chronic Diarrhoea.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted chronic diarrhoea. It has given me great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write to me. Yours gratefully, Henry Steinberger, Allentown, Pa. Sold by Blakeley & Houghton.
