FATAL GASOLINE EXPLOSION.

One Man Killed and Another Badly Burned at Astoria.

A terrible accident, resulting in the death of George James Layzell and the serious injury of Claude B. Hanthorn, the latter a brother of the well-known packer, J. O. Hanthorn, occurred at Astoria Monday morning.

The two men were sleeping in the cabin of the gasoline launch Hanthorn, which was lying at the iron works dock. About 4:30 a. m. Hanthorn was awakened by the groans of his roommate, and upon arising found the latter unconscious. At the same time he detected a strong odor of gasoline. He then struck a couple of matches, to get a better view of Layzell, and at the flash of the second match an explosion occurred. Hanthorn was enveloped in flames and his clothes caught fire. Rushing to the side of the launch, he jumped overboard and extinguished the flames. He then returned to the launch, and, frantic with the thought of the awful fate of his friend must surely meet, ran into the cabin, which was then a mass of flames. Although he was being frightfully burned, he made his way to Layzell's berth, but the occupant was no longer there. Then, half blinded and almost dead from suffocation, Hanthorn staggered to the deck. He jumped into the river and swam, with much difficulty, to the shore, where he summoned aid, and, with all possible speed No. 1 engine went to the scene and soon extinguished the flames.

Layzell's body, burned to a crisp, was found in one corner of the cabin, in a crouching position. The unfortunate young man probably recovered partial consciousness when the flames reached him. Hanthorn was taken to the residence of his brother, in East Astoria, where his injuries were attended to by a physician. He is severely burned, but will recover. He is almost demented over the loss of his companion.

The gasoline escaped through a stopcock in a tank, into which oil ran when the launch lifted.

JOHNNY MORAN'S INJURIES.

The East Oregonian Gives Full Details of the Accident.

A distressing accident occurred Monday morning in the O. R. & N. yard at Pendleton, resulting in serious and painful injury to John B. Moran, brakeman on a freight run between La Grande and Umatilla, says the East Oregonian.

Like many an accident it happened in coupling, and this time it caught a careful and experienced trainman through nobody's fault—not even his own.

Mr. Moran essayed to make the coupling and found the pin stuck fast. He went out and gave the signal to "slack ahead" a trifle. It was answered and he loosened the pin. When the train backed up the jar fastened the pin again and the difficult task of coupling under these circumstances was to much for the dexterity of even a man of Mr. Moran's experience. His hand caught between the bumpers, and he was carried two car lengths by the natural motion of the train before it slacked up and his hand was released. He managed to save himself from fainting and falling, else one more victim would have been added to the list of railroad sacrifices.

As it is, John Moran will not brake again for many a day. There was a compound fracture of the thumb and little finger of his right hand, the bones protruding from the flesh. The first two fingers were fractured and mashed in the joints. Nearly all the flesh was torn from the third finger, and this digit the doctors were compelled to amputate.

They hope to save the rest of the hand, although favorable conditions must prevail.

Mr. Moran came up town with his wounded hand bleeding profusely, bearing the pain with the grit and nerve necessary in the make-up of a true railroad man. In Dr. Smith's office he was operated upon by Dr. Vincent, the company physician, and Dr. Smith. He was soon under the influence of anaesthetics, and the finger was amputated and the hand dressed.

The Bonster Taken Down.

A silly youth was bragging of his great friends in a mixed company in which Douglas Jerrold was present, and said he had dined three times at Devonshire house and never saw any fish at table. "I can't account for it," he added. "I can," said Jerrold; "they ate it all upstairs."

With the close of the Presidential Campaign THE TRIBUNE recognizes the fact that the American people are now anxious to give their attention to home and business interests. To meet this condition, politics will have far less space and prominence, until another State or National occasion demands a renewal of the fight for the principles for which THE TRIBUNE has labored from its inception to the present day, and won its greatest victories.

Every possible effort will be put forth, and money freely spent, to make THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE pre-eminently a National Family Newspaper, interesting, instructive, entertaining and indispensable to each member of the family.

We furnish "The Chronicle" and N. Y. Weekly Tribune one year for only $1.75.
