Mr. C. D. Hinrichs brought a small band of cattle up from Hood River yesterday for the Columbia Packing Co.

Mr. R. B. Hood recently sent some fine almonds grown on his place at St. Helena, California, to friends. The almonds look as though they were good enough to eat.

It was reported yesterday that the Washington bank of the river, opposite this point, was covered with dead salmon, evidently thrown away because they could not be used.

This is the day upon which the sun crosses the equator on its southward journey, and the big round world has everywhere equal length of day and night.

The board of equalization will meet the first Monday in October, at which time all who are dissatisfied with their assessment, will be given the opportunity to correct any error. s7-d&wtf.

It is said that 80,000 sacks of grain are piled up at Wasco awaiting the completion of the railroad. This event is expected to happen before the 10th of next month, and probably several days before that time.

The Good Intent Society of the Methodist church will meet at the home of Mrs. Wm. Michell Wednesday afternoon. All ladies of the congregation, and particularly members of the society, are requested to be present.

The tug Astoria, formerly stationed at Astoria, arrived in Astoria from Gray's harbor Saturday, to tow the O. K., on which the big anchor and heavy chain have been loaded to be used in floating the Glenmorag off North beach.

The East Oregonian mentions the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gill will leave Pendleton for Portland in the near future, Mr. Gill, who is a fine mechanic, being employed to do finishing work on the government torpedo boats building there. Mr. Gill was at one time engineer of the Regulator.

About the largest yield of wheat yet reported comes from the old Daw place, on the Long Tom, says the Corvallis Times. It was Defiance wheat, and was grown by Frank Bumgardner. Six acres made an aggregate yield of 290 bushels, or 48⅓ bushels per acre. The farm is owned by Mrs. Stewart, of Corvallis.

Mr. C. J. Hayes, inspector of surveys, with a party consisting of E. J. Udell, W. Stranahan, Chas. Webb, R. J. Statt and Bert Stranahan, were in the city last night on their way to the Warm Springs, where they will correct some of the section and township lines. Their work will be abont twelve miles south of the agency.

The steamer Ione will make her first trip from Portland tomorrow, and is expected to arrive about 4 o'clock. Captain McNulty went down this morning and for a short time will act as mate. Mr. John Booth has accepted the position of agent and will have his office in the Baldwin building opposite the Umatilla.

Last week Gazner White and a companion killed three black bears near John White's hop yard, on Butte creek, in Marion county. Several other bruins were seen in that neighborhood. The bears are now coming down from the mountains to get acorns. They are very fond of acorns, and the oaks are loaded this year with nuts, says the Silverton Appeal.

Robert Bowlsby, while hunting at Pleasant hill, in Lane county, last Friday, killed a bird that is a cross between the native grouse and Mongolian pheasant, the first of the kind ever heard of in Eugene. It resembles the native grouse by having feathered legs and a tail a little longer, but the feathers on the back and tail have the same cross stripes as the Mongolian pheasant.

Mr. James Langille and son, Doug., arrived home from McCoy creek last week. Mr. Langille came up from Hood River last night. They spent the summer prospecting, and sunk a shaft in the gravel sixty-two feet. Mr. Langille has faith unlimited in the old gravel beds of that section. He thinks he is within ten feet of bedrock, and that when that is reached the Klondike will have to look out for its reputation.

The Indians now in the Yakima hopfields, number 3000 in number, will hold a jubilee in North Yakima, September 30 and October 2 and 3. The programme will consist of Indian pony races of all sorts and descriptions, Indian war dances, Indian wrestling matches, Indian barbecue and numerous other Indian doings. Dr. Hill has been elected director of Indian sports, and will have full charge of this branch of the jubilee.

Lloyd, the young son of Dr. Graves, of North Yakima, almost choked to death on Saturday. He had been to a fire on the night previous, and experienced considerable difficulty in breathing all the following morning. In the afternoon he began to suffocate, and the timely arrival of Dr. Hill resulted in his expelling from his throat several large pieces of cinder—while an emetic also brought forth two or three larger ones from his stomach.

Sheriff Sims, of Whitman county, reports that Jack Leonard, the murderer of Jacob Malquist, is still sullen, evidently impressed with the idea that the officers have lessened his chances of escaping punishment by bringing him back from the Spokane jail. He is now confined in the upper tier of cells, and is not given the liberties or permitted the visitors allowed during his former residence, the sheriff being more watchful in preventing the introduction of jail-breaking tools.

There is a smell distinctly and diabolically its own, that sweeps our town occasionally, but where it comes from nobody knows. It is democratic in the distribution of itself, going as freely to the poor as to the rich. The mephitis mephitica or its spotted brother the spilogate putrius otherwise a skunk would leave its vicinity, a dead mackeral under a full moon, or a decomposing salmon, or a double-barreled crematory or any little thing like that would be as attar of roses to a garbage wagon beside it. It is just a live throbbing pulsating all-pervading smell of something long dead but not gone before.

The Fair Will Go.

It looked for a little while as though the regular annual meeting of the Agricultural Association was to be abandoned and The Dalles was to pass by the regular fall fair. Sunday Mr. McAllister went to Pendleton and completed arrangements with the Secretary J. O. Mack, which permitted the matter to go on. It required considerable work here also, as the money for the purses had to be raised and other preliminary matters attended to. All the tangles here have been straightened out and the fair will go. The fact that it came near going by the board is going to make it a success, for it has caused everybody here to take an interest in it. The races and purses will be published in a few days. In the meanwhile Mr. MacAllister, who is acting as secretary will gladly furnish those desiring it, a copy of the premium list, and the names of the winners of last year's prizes. The fair begins October 12 and lasts five days.

Selected by an Artist.

Miss Mollie Bottorff arrives from San Francisco this evening. She has been there for a month studying and selecting styles and patterns, which are now arriving and will be displayed at Mrs. M. E. Briggs' parlors tomorrow. The work rooms there are in a state of commotion everything being piled high and thick with specimens of the milliners' art. Tomorrow the stock of fall patterns and shapes will be displayed, and about the middle of next week there will be a grand display of winter hats along with the fall stock. It is without doubt, the largest, best selected, and best stock of millinery ever brought to The Dalles.

The announcement of the display of winter goods will be made later, in the meanwhile the ladies can find something to delight them in the fall stock.

Bread, cakes and everything of that kind, as well as confectionery, ice cream, etc., at the Elite, next door to Parkin's barber shop. 7-tf

A BIG INDUSTRY LOST.

The Pendleton Roller Mills Go Up in Flame and Smoke.

The East Oregonian of Monday says: The Pendleton Roller Mills, 500 barrels capacity, owned by W. S. Byers, are a thing of the past.

No more, unless the mills are re-built, will Pendleton people congratulate themselves upon the success and magnitude of such an industry in their midst. No more will admiring reporters speak of the big shipments made to China, Japan, Australia and South America. No more will the handsome fac simile of the premium ribbon won by "Byers' Best" at the World's Fair, adorn the many sacks of this splendid flour turned out at the mill.

All that remains of the Pendleton Roller Mills is a heap of ashes, a desolate pile of smoking ruins, an immense heap of burned wheat, vast quantities of broken stone. When one turns his face to the east from the business center the sight of a large building no longer greets his eyes. The musical hum of the mill, telling of industry and prosperity and employment for many people, no longer pleases his ears. Lost are these things through the agency of that awful demon of destruction, fire—soaring higher, higher, in a frenzy of desire, to reach the moon.

Fearful was this fire in its intensity and destruction. Someone said that it did more damage than all the fires of the past together in Pendleton, and the remark does not fall far short of the truth. It destroyed an enterprise that was the pride of this city and of large benefit. It consumed property valued at fully $150,000 and protected by only $50,000 insurance. It blasted at a blow the labor of a man who has worked for years to build it up, and whose life and energy were centered in its success. There is no one in the community, in the county, in Eastern Oregon, but who will sympathize with W. S. Byers and his business daughter, Sophia.

The fire started at 3:30 o'clock this morning, and it was 5 o'clock before the flames were under reasonable control. To the fact that there was no brisk wind blowing may be ascribed the fortunate circumstance that the fire was confined to the mill and warehouses. The court house, woolen and scouring mills, Byers' residence, and other property near, were seriously threatened.

The mill was a modern and expensive one, and cost in the neighborhood of $150,000 all told. Its present worth was at least $75,000. Wheat, flour, warehouses and other property destroyed will bring the total to $150,000.

Up-to-Date Clothing.

This shows the inside finish of A. M. Williams & Co.'s $9, all-wool, fancy cassimere suit; made with French shoulder facing, same edged with satin piping, lined with extra quality Italian cloth. None better for the money, go where you will.

Stoves and Sunshine.

Eugene Field after visiting Europe, said that the one thing he missed most in his travels was the great American stove. The first thing he did when he got home was to write a poem, entitled "Stoves and Sunshine," in which he paid his respects to the stoveless, cheerless, shivering countries he had visited. In the second verse, which we print herewith, it will be seen that the poet made an inexcusable mistake by writing "Yankee" instead of Garland. Read the verse and see, and then call on Maier & Benton and see the stoves.

Now, I am of opinion that a person should get some Warmth in this present life of ours, not all in that to come;
So when Boreas blows his blast through country and through town,
Or when upon the muddy streets the stifling fog rolls down,
Go, guzzle in the pub, or plod some bleak, malarious grove,
But let me toast my shrunken shanks beside some Yankee stove.

1,000,000 People

IN the United States now enjoying food cooked in the MAJESTIC affirm that the half has not been said in its praise. The manufacturers of this Range pledge themselves that all parts of the MAJESTIC except the firebox and the new series Nos. 201 to 212, are made of steel and malleable iron, and purchasers are assured that it is as good and as honest as skilled labor and money can produce. If the parts now in malleable iron were (as in other so-called steel ranges) made of cast iron, the price could be greatly reduced; but the MAJESTIC is not made with a view to furnishing extra parts for repairs.
