THEOSOPHY ON THE KLONDIKE.

Annie Eva Fay is going to Alaska, even unto Klondike, in order to spread the doctrine of Theosophy. As there is only about one believer in the double-barreled constitution of humanity, out of 200,000 of the citizens of the United States, at first blush it would appear that Annie Eva, bless her dear little soul, might find material to preach her interchangeable doctrine to without going so far. We fear there is method, much method, in Annie Eva's efforts, else why does she not project her astral body up Klondikewards, while she leaves the material body down in Boston, where beans and brown-bread are abundant for its sustenance. The astral body could go flurting with the Aurora borealis and playing leap frog of mornings with the parabola. If anything on earth could enjoy an Alaskan winter it would seem that one of these intangible shapes in the form of an astral body, with nothing about it that could freeze, no stomach demanding fish oil and dog meat to keep up the supply of caloric, would be that thing.

And all the time the astral form was hobnobbing with the gaunt-flanked, go-hungry-to-bed millionaires from way-up-the-Klondike, the material body could be partaking of its regular pabulum three times a day along with its fellow-spectacled bean weevils of America's literary and leguminous center. A bi-corporal existence with the tangible in Boston and the ethereal in Dawson City is the ideal, at least until the wild goose, that knows enough to stay away from the Yukon until spring, twirls his honker in wild notes of defiance at his hated rival, the diamond-drill-billed mosquito, of which every snowflake that falls hatches two.

We fear, though, that Annie Eva will insist upon the earthly body accompanying the astral, for the latter has no pockets in its skirtlets that would hold the yellow boodle. The gold-paved streets of Dawson City, especially the gold, is, we fear, the attraction that draws Annie Eva into this new missionary field. Though, for that matter, it is quite probable that before spring there will be no better field for personal observation of the habits and actions of astral bodies than on the Klondike. The chances will be good, exceedingly good, before spring for a large supply of astral bodies that will be estrays from being projected so far from the tangible body that they will never find their way back, or if they do will be unable to re-conglutinate on the old basis.

However, Annie Eva has our consent to go, just like any other Fay. She is no fairy of ours, and what she does is no affair of ours; and yet we hope she may catch a bearded, gold-vermired Klondiker and get back to Bay street, Boston, with something besides the scurvy.

There is an election to be held in this state in nine months. Why not try the South Carolina plan of having a separate box at the polls, where every man may express his choice for United States senator? The politicians are fighting John H. Mitchell as they fought Clay and Webster, as they have in later days fought Sherman and Blaine. The people are not fighting him, but, on the contrary, are solidly behind him, and could they have the opportunity of expressing their choice, he would have an overwhelming majority. The pyrophanous editor of the Oregonian and the auriferous appointee of our auricular governor, to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Debs is falling over himself in his wild desire to set himself right on the strike question. He now says: "Strikes don't pay. All strikes are lost; they are useless; they are caused by the employing classes. When capitalists get ready for a strike they provoke it, knowing full well that their cause is won before the conflict is begun."

The Oregonian thinks Mr. Geer's declination almost epochal. So it is, it marks the beginning of Mr. Geer's decline. It also asserts that "the fervor of the response in this case gives just cause for pride to every honest man in the state." This accounts for the Oregonian-Corbett push being glad, but not proud.

A Washington paper that advocated the election of Governor Rogers has become disgruntled, and says that the governor "spits in the faces of his friends." The Seattle Post-Intelligencer suggests that "the governor shows excellent taste in the selection of his cuspidors."
