A WORD TO THE COMMERCIAL CLUB.

The Commercial Club of this city is enjoying a season of high prosperity. Organized not quite two years ago, the club soon attained a degree of popularity which insured its financial and social success. Its membership grew till it embraced the greater portion of the city's business men, and the club rooms became the central point in the social life of the town. By the patronage which attended from the start the club soon paid off the small debt incurred at the outset, and every month showed a surplus, till the question of what to do with the money called for the attention of the directors.

The club is now entering upon an enlarged career. It is doubling its present quarters, putting in twice as many bowling alleys, and making the social features more attractive than ever. The rooms when finished, as they are to be next month, will be unsurpassed in point of elegance and comfort by any such organization on the coast in a city no larger than The Dalles. This is an extremely felicitous state of affairs, and every citizen will rejoice in the success which has accompanied this venture to give The Dalles what it has long needed, a rallying point for its social and business interests.

The influence of the Commercial Club has been of the best, its rooms have had an attractive welcome for the young men of The Dalles; there, they have been enabled to meet on common ground their elders in years, and the intercourse has probably proven as pleasant to the one as profitable to the other. The gymnasium and bowling alleys have offered inducements to those who needed the stimulus of light exercise, while at the same time taking it in a pleasing form. The reading rooms have supplied a want which had long existed, and so, altogether, the story of The Dalles Commercial and Athletic Club is a pleasant one to write.

As the club occupies a public position in the eyes of the community, the press of the city feel justified in discussing its affairs with greater freedom than they would the enterprises of private individuals, and what we say in this connection is done in an appreciative manner and without any feeling of criticism. But the question has arisen whether or not the Commercial Club has progressed equally along all the lines upon which it was founded, or if it has not developed the social side to the detriment of its commercial and business features.

The latter question can be answered in the negative. The club has not done too much in the social line, and all its efforts and successes are worthy of praise; but the former question may call for another answer. Many people joined the club with the hope that by such an organization a discussion of the city's interests and needs would be at all times pertinent and plans devised for their furtherment. To a certain extent this has been done, and well done; but there are other pressing questions that are demanding more attention from this organization than they are receiving. The matter of good roads leading out of town; the question of inducing foreign capital to invest in The Dalles; the establishment of manufacturing industries here, which will give a market for our raw products and the employment of labor; plans for the reducing of taxation and improvement of the city's general condition. All these are proper subjects for the consideration of the club, and are questions which such bodies in other towns are daily considering. The Commercial Club has various committees appointed to investigate these matters, but how often do they report? When any particular duty is assigned them the committees do the work thoroughly and well, but the efforts must not be spasmodic, but continuous. In this way sooner or later good results must follow.

It is a delicate thing to discuss matters of local concern, but when it is done in a spirit of fairness and with thoughts only of the common good, none can complain, even though what is written does not coincide with their views. How to build up The Dalles is the thought every business man should hold foremost in his mind, as by the growth of the town his own prosperity will be increased.

Common effort is what is needed to bring about the desired end. He who doubts this axiom should turn to Esop's fables and read the story about the bundle of fagots.
