THE BEST PLACE FOR CAPITAL TO INVEST.

The bounteous harvest which has attended the country, and the very satisfactory price which wheat is commanding, are making money plentiful in all sections where the people have products to sell. Especially is this true in the neighborhood surrounding The Dalles. Wasco, Sherman and Klickitat counties are in better condition today than they have ever been since the first plow turned the maiden earth and the occupation of these lands began. Many farmers, who a year or two ago did not see their way clear through the difficulties surrounding them, are now rejoicing in debts discharged and mortgages lifted. The song of prosperity is heard in the land, bringing happiness to the men and women who have struggled through discouragements untold for the objects now attained. Many of the wheat raisers and stock men are in more than independent positions, with money to invest. Already the banks and money-lenders are feeling the change in conditions, and there is far less demand for loans at ten per cent now than there was a year ago. Many signers of notes not yet due are willing and glad to wipe out their obligations and save the interest charges.

As a natural result capital, which needs always to be employed to earn returns, must seek other investments. County warrants are no longer at a discount; heavy premiums and high rates of interest cannot be obtained when there is more money to loan than there is demand, and new places must be found where capital will yield fair returns for its use.

With the enactment of a tariff law that promises continued prosperity and stability, men with money are willing to embark in enterprises which in the last four years have been entirely out of the question. Manufactures, railroad building and investments of like nature cannot be made while the interest charge is high, but when it is lowered so as to leave a margin for profits, these same opportunities attract the investor.

We are but entering upon what promises to be an era of good times. But a small portion of the wheat crop has been sold, and the excess of money has not been felt so markedly as yet; but it is coming, and when it does those who have it will begin looking around for new fields of investment. It is just this condition which is needful for The Dalles. This is a rich city, containing more wealth to its size, probably, than any other town in the state; but, as is well understood wherever The Dalles is known, its opportunities are not developed. Since capital is to seek some place where it can be used, no where can it turn with greater safety than to the city at the head of present navigation upon the Columbia. Almost any industry, wisely managed, would succeed in The Dalles. The boat line, which was started at a time when the outlook seemed unpromising, has prospered far beyond the dreams of its promoters; our flouring mills have paid handsome returns since the day the machinery started; our merchants are continually adding to their stocks and facilities for trade; our mammoth warehouses have had all the business they could comfortably handle. Of a truth the present condition of the city's business interests can be called eminently satisfactory.

It is the duty of our citizens to see that the attendant prosperity continues. In no way can this be done better than by investing home capital at home, seeking at the same time to attract investors from abroad. This is what other towns have done, and how well it has paid them is a patent fact. Five or six years ago, when the boom on the sound was in full blast, many people in The Dalles took their surplus money and bought property in Seattle and Tacoma. Most of them have the property yet. They may, in course of time, realize on their investments, but it is safe to say that had this same money been put into enterprises here in The Dalles, which would tend to the building up of the city's permanent prosperity, every one of these same investors would be better off today financially, to say nothing of civic pride.

Capital is going around seeking a place for use. Let it not pass The Dalles by as it has done in former years; but rather let us show to the world our confidence in our town by putting our own money in enterprises which will cause the employment of men and the consumption of raw products. In this way better than any other will foreign capital be attracted.
