 THE CHINERE TARIFF.

One of the most important objects of Li Hung Chang's tour around the world was to obtain the consent of the nations to an increase by China of her foreign tariff rates. Just what success the astute old statesman obtained is not yet known; but it is said Great Britain agreed to his proposition on the condition that the "likin," or provincial tariff, be abolished. Chinese imports and exports pay a tariff duty, but before produce from the interior enters foreign hands and before any extra provincial produce enters native hands provincial duty must also be paid. While the customs duties form the chief part of China's total revenue, the "likin" is not an inconsiderable contributor, and would be much greater but for the fact that the various viceroys and mandarins are entirely free to squeeze as much as they can from the people. Besides the foreign customs duties and provincial duties, there are land, salt and rice taxes, the native customs and the license system.

No part of the revenue is published except that coming from maritime customs and the opium "likin." Under the new treaty between China and Japan greater freedom will be allowed to foreign traders and manufacturers, but Li Hung Chang says that they should contribute to the necessities of the Chinese exchequer. He proposes to allow the various viceroys to arrange the duties leviable at the place of production in Chinese produce; but with regard to machinery manufactures to tax all at the rate of ten per cent ad valorem. If he obtains the consent of the nations for an increase in the custom duties, the nations will insist in return on abolishing the "likin." If the present system continue, the Chinese foreign office may obtain its victory by taxing manufactures in China.

Norway seems to have abandoned her free trade ideas and come over to protection. A new tariff law has recently gone into effect, the aim of which is "to protect home production," whereas the purpose of the old law was simply "to provide revenue for the needs of the government." Norway has long been a disciple of the Cobden school of free trade, and has clung to her faith with characteristic stubbornness, even when her sister nation, Sweden, re-established protection in 1888. During the last ten years, however, the protection sentiment has increased steadily and slowly among the farmers and manufacturers, until last year the Storting appointed a tariff commission to frame a bill "to protect home production." The report of the commission was made public last May, and the bill soon became a law. The farmers obtain substantially all the protection they demanded. The new law, however, recognizes the benefits of commercial treaties with other countries, and, accordingly, the principle of reciprocity has been adopted.

 Something to Depend On.

Mr. James Jones, of the drug firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with LaGrippe, and her case grew so serious that physicians at Cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develop into Hasty Consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from the first dose, and half dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to do this good work. Try it. Free trial bottles at Blakeley & Houghton's Drug Store. (5)
