dence is given to estimates based on estimates of foreign needs are supseason.

In the fiscal year 1892-'93 the exports of wheat and flour were 192,-000,000 bushels, of which 51,000,000 bushels went out in the first quarter. This year the exports in the first quarter have been over 52,000,000 bushels, and foreign advices indicate a shortage 100,000,000 bushels greater than usual. In the last four years the exports from this country have averaged slightly over 145,000,000 bushels, and were slightly more than that quantity last year, so that the increase in foreign deficit would imply a need of 245,000,000 bushels from this country unless foreign con sumption should be restricted, or the crops to come in after January 1st should exceed expectations.

The markets net only discard the official estimates, but evidently incline to accept the highest figures as probable, because the price has been depressed by realizing of great speculative pools, and yet has not fallen at any time below about 93 cents. When it is considered that no such price has been realized in September or October since 1891, when the foreign demand took over 225,000,000 bushels from the only crop which has ever exceeded the current estimates for this year, it No. 14 -Running, 12 mile and repeat, $125. must be accepted as the judgment of the market that the yield has been No. 16-Special race, $150. large enough to provide about as furnished on application to great a surplus for export as was shipped in 1892. If that quantity, 192,000,000 bushels, should be found to suffice with some decrease in foreign consumption, the crop would have to be 584,000,000 bushels to meet the demand without further reducing stocks remaining at the end of the crop year, which were the lowest July 1st for the last six years. Any prospect of material reduction in the stock carried over would tend almost irresistibly to higher prices than have yet been realized this year. Thus the general opinion, as well as the information of the crop reporters entitled to most confidence, seems to be that the yield of 1897 will be found not far from 590,000,- other countries after January over 50,000,000 bushels more than such countries have furnished in recent years. That their crops promise better than those of last year is evi dent, but whether they will be able to supply as large a quantity as that named for export must remain a THURSDAY - OCTOBER 14, 1897 matter of doubt until after the new year has begun. Meanwhile the activity of the export demand will be likely to influence the course of The [October trade estimates of American markets strongly, and for
