GAY MUSIC AT A FUNERAL.

Custom in Vincennes That Destroys Much That is Gracious at Grave.

People in Vincennes have been witnessing what is called "a gay funeral," according to a paradoxical phrase, reports the London Telegraph. Mr. Ferret, a resident in that suburban borough for many long years, died recently at the age of 80. He left instructions in his will that the local brass band should be engaged for his funeral, and that lively music was to be played during the journey to the graveyard. The octogenarian's relatives fulfilled his wishes to the letter. In the black-bordered invitations to the interment sent out by them they announced the names of the airs to be heard during the funeral. As the cortege started for the cemetery, the band struck up the appropriate "Chant du Depart," to the intense astonishment of the master of ceremonies sent by the Pompes Funebres, who knew nothing about the last wishes of the deceased octogenarian in the matter of music. Then the bandmen played a series of polkas and mazurkas, and wound up at the cemetery with the "Marseillaise." After the funeral all adjourned to a tavern, where drink was ordered in abundance. The instrumentalists, having been refreshed, played more lively music and then everybody returned home, apparently satisfied with the day's outing. This is the third funeral of the kind which has been organized in France within the past 12 months.

Getting at the Truth.

The other day an old woman, hawking artificial flowers from door to door, begged of the wife in a very pitiful tone to buy some.

"I have no use for them," said the wife.

"Oh, do lay out a copper," she pleaded; "I haven't taken a penny all day, nor even broken my fast."

The wife, believing this to be true, was just about to give her some coppers, and happened to say:

"Well, I am very sorry for you, but I really don't want the flowers; in fact, I don't like any you have, but—"

"What?" shouted the old woman; "don't like 'em? Why, the woman next door has just bought a shilling's worth!"

Then bang went the door.—Spare Moments.

HINTS ON FRUIT CANNING.

A Few Things That the Housewife Should Remember.

In canning fruit, remember that it is hard and disagreeable work at best, and unless you can come within sight of its highest possibilities, "the game is not worth the candle." Whether it is good, bad or indifferent depends upon your own knowledge and skill. Excluding the air to prevent fermentation is only the A B C of success. Fruit must look as well as taste delicious, and, in order to do this, it must retain its natural flavor and appearance, and be sweetened with granulated sugar. Fruit for canning must be freshly picked, and a little under rather than over ripe.

All berries except strawberries should be large and firm. With these the smaller the better. Blackberries, no matter how fine or of what kind, are never satisfactory and palatable. Cherry pits add much to the flavor, and when removed from the fruit a handful should be tied in a piece of net and put in the center of each jar. Pear seeds should be used in the same way if the core is removed. Cherries are richer and handsomer colored if the sirup is made of half currant juice.

The skins of green gage plums should be left on and pierced with a fork before they are cooked. The skins of all other common varieties should be removed. If plums and peaches are immersed in boiling water to loosen the skins, only a few should be treated at a time, and those should first be put in a wire basket or sieve. After remaining two minutes or so dip in cold water and gently rub off the skins.

A silver knife should be used to shred pineapple and pare pears and quinces. Peaches should be put in sirup as soon as pared, and pears and quinces into cold water, to prevent discoloration. Peaches are firmer and richer if allowed to remain over night in the sirup before they are cooked. Five or six pits should be distributed through each quart jar.

The most delicate and natural flavor is obtained by cooking the fruit in the jars. This method also does away with the breakage from handling, and adds greatly to its appearance. Pears and quinces are no exception to this rule, but, as both are more quickly cooked tender in clear water, it is more convenient to do so before they are put in sirup.

All old jars should be thoroughly cleansed with soda and boiling water, and the air-tightness of every jar should be tested with water before they are filled with fruit, which should be placed in the jar as fast as it is prepared, and the jar filled to the neck with sirup.

A flat-bottomed kettle or an ordinary clothes boiler are convenient for cooking, and a board fitted to the bottom loosely and closely filled with inch augerholes obviates all danger of breakage. Put the rubber and cover in position, leaving the latter loose; fill the boiler in warm water to the neck of the jars and boil gently until the fruit can be easily pierced with a fork. No definite rule for cooking can be given. Ten minutes is usually long enough for berries, while the time required for larger and more solid fruits depends upon their ripeness. Experience soon makes one expert. Take each jar out onto a hot plate, fill to overflowing with boiling water, and screw down the top. Tighten as it cooks, and invert to be sure that it is air-tight.

The jars should be wrapped in paper to exclude the light, which is more injurious than one is apt to think, and kept in a cool, dry place. The flavor of fruit is more improved if the oxygen is restored by removing the cover an hour or two before it is needed.

If rich fruit is desired, the following quantities of sugar for each pint jar will be satisfactory, but as sugar is not the "keeping power," much less, or even none, may be used: Strawberries, seven ounces; raspberries, four ounces; whortleberries, four ounces; cherries, six ounces; peaches, five ounces; Bartlett pears, six ounces; sour pears, eight ounces; plums, eight ounces; quinces, eight ounces.—N.
