NEEDED KNOWLEDGE.

Mr. Killin, Benton Killin, he of the rotund head and gular body; he who was appointed one of a select committee of two to investigate the southern shores of Alaska, with a view to ascertaining the values and possibilities of that strip for kitchen gardens, small fruits and diversified agriculture, has returned. Not only has he returned, but he has reported; and not only has he reported, but he has confirmed the vague ideas possessed by most people that Alaska as an agricultural country will not average more than three in a scale of 37. Mr. Killin's garden truck can be grown very cheaply along the southern coast by being planted in Washington, California and Oregon, and transplanted by sailing vessels when the garden sass is ripe. The herring and codfish grounds are inexhaustible. The grasses will grow luxuriantly, and by clearing the land, some snow-bound philanthropist can make two blades grow where one grew before.

Benton tells all this cheerfully, seemingly unconscious of the homely old Persian proverb that "He who tells all that he knows, often tells more than he knows." Of course Benton has not told much, but there is not much to tell. The department has secured through him and his colleague information much needed—by it, and we would suggest that the commission be sent still further north to pry into the possibilities of growing garden truck on the Coppermine, or raising beans by subsiding the remains of Professor Andree's balloon.

DIRTY WOMAN.

Portland ladies are agitating the subject of short skirts; but while all seem to indorse the wearing of skirts reaching only to the shoe tops, none of them wear them.

The most senseless thing of all the hundreds of millions of senseless things woman has been guilty of, from marrying Adam to riding a bike, the wearing of skirts that dragged the dirt is the most utterly imbecile and defenseless. Yet, regardless of weather, the dainty dimitted darlings will don snowy linen or immaculate silk and then start down town on a street-sweeping expedition. In half an hour's walk their skirts have dragged together and dropped at the crossings or gratings innumerable little piles of cigar stubs, tobacco quids, half burned matches, old papers, and the filth and garbage pertaining to the street.

These, heaven knows (if heaven takes cognizance of such things) are bad enough, but besides this collection the skirt has gathered other riches. For instance, a small section of lung discarded by some poor devil who had no use for it; specimens of a dozen different varieties of catarrh; expectorations in nineteen dead languages, and a hundred other evidences of civilization. The worst of these she takes home with her to dry around the house ere they go out to make the heart and stomach of the washerwoman glad.

Man individually and collectively is a dirty brute, or these things would not be on the street; but, being there, we see no reason why any woman should desire to gather them in her skirts.

WHAT HE WILL DO.

Just prior to last Tuesday's elections, Henry Watterson said in his paper, the Courier Journal: "If the gold Democratic candidate in Kentucky should prove to have an inconsiderable vote, the gold Democrats would abide by the verdict of a sufficient Democratic majority, and "would certainly not embroil and embitter their lives by a prolonged struggle against such odds to save the country and the party from the abyss of the revolution to which the preachments of men like Mr. Bryan of Nebraska and Henry George, to say nothing about Senator Tillman and Governor Altgeld, are hurrying all who follow their lead. What the rest can stand, we can stand. We are Democrats, not Republicans, and, if it be the destiny of the country, to become the sport and prey of the professional partisan politicians, swinging the pendulum from one to the other dizzy height of radicalism, we shall go with the organized fools rather than the organized knaves; though we do not want to go with either."

As Mr. Watterson casts his eagle glance over the returns, and finds that the gold wing of the Democratic party had not even pin-feathers on it, he will probably be not only dazed, but disorganized. However, Henry is a man of his word, and will enroll himself among those whom he has classed as "organized fools."

The three-year-old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is sure that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros., of that place, and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to select from, and skilled physicians to answer to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own home at a time when his boy's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of the croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling cough medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by Blakeley & Houghton.
