The grand jury today returned true bills against E. Simmons, Hugh Brown and Robert Wilson, charged with assault and battery upon Geo. Rea, and against I. V. Howland for larceny by bailee in stealing wheat from J. L. Story.

Under the city charter the Seattle council had until Monday to elect a successor to Mayor Wood. Hereafter it must meet once a day until it has agreed upon Wood's successor. The three prominent candidates for the office are T. J. Humes, H. R. Cline and J. M. E. Atkinson.

Those who have received invitations to the Circle ball on Friday evening, November 19th, please bear in mind it is to be held in the Vogt. No expense has been spared to make this the ball of the season. The Circle never does anything by halves, and its guests are assured a pleasant evening.

The finishing touches are being put on the Commercial rooms, and they are certainly as fine as any in the Northwest. As soon as everything is finished and the tout ensemble is in place, a special reporter will be detailed to write a description of the club's new home. Until then any attempt to do the subject justice would fail.

The O. R. & N. has made a new freight schedule between this city and Portland which is now in effect, the rates being the same each way. First-class freight is fifteen cents per hundred pounds; second 12 1/2 cents; third 10 cents, and fourth 7 1/2 cents. This is in less than carload lots. Carload lots is five cents per hundred for all freight except class A, which is 7 1/2 cents. Wheat is 5 cents per hundred pounds.

Chauncey M. Depew will not be orator of the occasion of unveiling the monument erected near Walla Walla to the memory of Marcus Whitman, on November 29, the 50th anniversary of the Whitman massacre. At the exercises at the monument on the brow of the hill Dr. James L. Wilson will be the orator. In the evening public exercises will be held in the opera house at Walla Walla, Rev. L. H. Hallock, of Oakland, formerly pastor of the First Congregational church of Tacoma, being the principal speaker.

The case of C. E. Bayard, administrator, against the Standard Oil Co. is up for trial today, and most of the afternoon was taken up in securing a jury. The case involves some nice questions of law, and with Judge Bennett on one side and Cake and Fenton on the other, it promises to be a battle royal. The action is brought to recover damages for the death of Perry Watkins, who was killed by his horse running away. Plaintiffs allege that the horse became frightened at the oil tank put up near the road and that it caused the accident.

The Degree of Honor had a social time last night after regular lodge work. The committee on amusement had provided a guessing contest, and the editor of this paper is pleased to state that he walked off with the booby prize. He has been guessing what position the Oregonian would take next so long that his guesser has slipped a cog, broke its main spring, and is generally all broke up. The prize consisted of a rubber doll that whistled through a hole in its head when squeezed, another point of similarity with the results in that other guessing contest.

Ira Millard has been found guilty as charged, and he was charged with indecency. He will be sentenced tomorrow, but as he has already been in jail four months, his sentence will undoubtedly be light. Of course offenses against the law must be punished, and yet it does look as though it could be managed with less expense, and it certainly could be if justices of the peace should, instead of binding prisoners over to the grand jury, make the punishment fit the crime when within their jurisdiction. The Millard case will cost the county between $300 and $350, when it should have been disposed of for $75.

Not Out of Sight.

Monday's Mountaineer contained the following:

Saturday night Cascade Lodge, B. P. O. Elks, gave a "stag social" that was "out of sight," because it was conducted in the hall behind closed doors. What was done cannot be given to the public for the reason that it was a "closed session."

Now the writer of this article, being a "jiner" of secret organizations, did not intend to disclose what she saw and heard of that "stag social," but when Brother Douthit made such a bold statement in his journal, we wish to correct him and say that it might have been a closed session, but not closed windows, and a view from Third street, through the open windows of the Elks' hall (when the hands of the old time piece were rapidly nearing the midnight hour) to passers by was a scene of curiosity, mingled with enjoyment. Whether they were trying to sing "Auld Lang Syne" or "America" the writer could not decide; nor are we familiar enough with the Elks' language to know whether the sounds that made the walls of that massive structure of the Vogt building tremble, was intended for a medley or a "soothing lullaby" that one hears in the neighborhood of an Indian war dance. But suffice to say we could distinguish Judge B—d—w's voice, and others too numerous to mention, and if there were a quartet of spectators uninvited sharing the Elks' pleasures, we fully agree with Bro. Douthit that The Dalles Elks know how to entertain; but contradict his statement that they were "out of sight." XXX.

Circle Pointers.

The Pacific Circle, Women of Woodcraft, Pacific jurisdiction, is a fraternal and beneficiary order that is thoroughly wide awake. On April 1, 1897, it had but seven members, the originators of the order. Today in the nine Pacific states it numbers three thousand, nearly all of whom are carrying protection certificates—protection for those who remain behind these members in cases of death, and depending on their careful management to insure against actual want for their families. The Pacific Circle expect to overlap the five thousand mark by January 1, 1898.

Their amount of insurance is from $500 to $2000, and an enduring monument similar to that of the Woodmen, will be placed at the grave of every deceased beneficiary lady member. The order has paid all death claims in full this year. Two in Oregon during September.

Immense Lake Traffic.

A London daily paper seems suddenly to have awoke to the fact that we have not only large lakes in America, but that we have a few ships and steamships on their mighty waters, and remarks: "Few people on this side of the Atlantic realize the magnitude of the trade on the great American lakes. Comparing the average number of vessels passing through the Suez canal with that of the Soo canal, the traffic of the former is in-
