FEMINE FASHIONS.

Fresh Additions to the Summer Costumes. Trimmed skirts increase in favor as the season advances.

Mousseline brillante is a new gauzy textile much used by Raudnitz, Beers and Paquin for draping evening toilets.

Most of the new tucked evening gowns of gauzy material have rows of handsome Venetian lace insertion on bodice and skirt.

Accordion-plaited skirts of black silk grenadine, canvas tulle, black Swiss muslin dotted in silk, fancy French and Russian nets, and similar diaphanous textiles, are made up over gored foundations of brilliant Turkish red or golden-yellow satin.

Gros de Tours is one of the popular silks this summer and has a soft finished corded surface, slightly heavier in quality than taffeta, but less glossy.

For cool and pretty gowns—qualities that in the eyes of the majority nowadays lose nothing by the additional fact that they are inexpensive—nothing is better than the sheer delicate all-wool delaines trimmed with ribbon in any of the thousand and one ways approved by fashion.

Elderly women can suitably wear delaines in dark colors for morning dress. The material is not suitable for afternoon dress. In lighter combinations of color, however, delaine handsomely trimmed with lace or ribbon leaves little to be desired on the score of smartness.—N. Y. Post.

The Quarrelsome Scorpion.

The scorpion is the most quarrelsome creature in the world. Two placed in the same box will always sting each other to death.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"The worst cold I ever had in my life was cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes W. H. Norton, of Sutter Creek, Cal. "This cold left me with a cough and I was expectorating all the time. The remedy cured me and I want all my friends when troubled with a cough or cold to use it, for it will do them good. Sold by Blakeley & Houghton."

New Rules of the Road for Ships Under Way.

The Leading Nations of the World to Be Governed on the Regulations—Greater Safety to Be Insured.

The new rules of the road at sea have just gone into effect among the leading countries of the world, and there is little doubt that their strict enforcement will greatly enhance the safety of the mariner and the charges placed within his keeping.

Away back at the beginning of the present century a system of signaling for vessels by means of flags was devised by the British merchant service, and 50 years later at least ten systems were in vogue. The result was a Babel of bunting, and all the systems were rendered ineffective, for the reason that those using one were unable to decipher the others.

When the question of means of communication was being considered, the more important question of a universal rule of navigation was neglected, and it was not until 1889 that the Washington marine conference was held. After a series of discussions, which lasted until the last day of 1890, the new rules were adopted.

The new rules are strict in their provisions, and will be rigidly enforced. The regulations regarding the carrying of lights on vessels at night are very concise, and no excuses that they were being trimmed, that the night was moonlight, that it was only a short time after sunset, will be taken. Provision is made for all classes of vessels to carry lights after dark, and even the smallest craft must exhibit a lantern with red and green slides when approaching another vessel.

Signals for fog are the subject of a lengthy article in the new rules, and they differ considerably from the old rules. Two additional rules are introduced, arranging for two prolonged blasts to be given by steam vessels under way but not moving through the water; and, second, for a long blast, followed by two short blasts, to be given by vessels towed and towing, vessels not under command, vessels not able to maneuver as required by these new rules, and vessels at work on telegraph cable.

The steering rules for sailing vessels, the overtaking rule and the rule for sound signals for vessels in sight of one another are very complete and do not show wide or strongly-pronounced divergence from the old rules.

The merit of the rules lies largely in the fact of their international recognition.—Baltimore Sun.

German Miners Superstitious.

Probably the most superstitious class of men in the world, barring the sailors, are miners—those who delve in the bowels of the earth for coal or minerals. In Germany the mines are believed to be the abiding places of queer little old men not over two feet high, who ape in dress the ordinary miners, they vary in character; some are good, some are bad. In Wales the miners are haunted by goblin miners, known as knockers. They make strange noises, and the tapping of their picks can be heard in ore bodies not yet reached by the human workmen.
