AN INDIAN BRIDE.

The Romantic Engagement of a Sioux Maiden.

She Becomes the Wife of an Irish man Who Saved Her Father's Life and Gave Her an Ednention.

A notable wedding occurred at Bismarck, N. D., on June 24. The bride was Picture Eyes, the daughter of John Moose, an old warrior, who has scalped many a white man and participated in many a tribal battle. The bridegroom was Thomas Dulaine Cronan, an Irishman by birth. The marriage ceremony was performed first by a Roman Catholic priest, after which the Indians had a genuine old-fashioned wedding feast. The wedding was the culmination of a courtship extending over seven years, which has been attended by unusual incidents.

Picture Eyes at the age of 18 was a well-formed, pretty-faced girl who could not speak a word of any but the Sioux language, and had never known the ways and customs of the white man. She lived then in a tepee with her parents. Now she is 25 years of age, educated and refined. Her father, John Moose, lives on the Standing Rock reservation, but the bride has been a member of Col. Frank Duncan's family, having been adopted by him several years J W Blakeney, hauling ago with the consent of her parents.

Cronan first came to this country. He was then about 25 years of age and came out west through the instrumentality of Moreton Frewen, an English Gunning & Hockman, labor financier, who was at that time in- El Light Co, lights, etc terested with Marquis de Mores in the W A Johnst n, pudse cattle raising and exporting business. John Heebner, labor Cronan was sent to America as a sort L M Wilson, of special agent to look after the in- James Like, terests of the English capitalists, and W D Sloper, his duties brought him to the cattle raising regions of Montana and Wyoming once each year. On his third trip he had occasion to stop off at MeChas J. nes. labor. dora, and it was there that he met the Chas Borders, labor. Indian girl. Upon the day of his arrival a Sioux Indian had been thrown into jail for attempting to set fire to a ranchman's barn and there was a mob Indian. The plucky constable, who that made a move forward, but it was certain that he could not stand the mob off very long, and already a detachment of the would-be lynchers had begun to batter in the lone window of the building. In the meantime an Indian girl had appeared upon the scene and as darting about making frantic efentreaties she was screaming in the In-cede for the life of the Indian, though he realized that it was a dangerous move and might cost him his life. Elbowing through the mob, he sprang to the side of the constable and shouted out a plea for the Indian. He persevered in his efforts whenever the din subsided long enough for him to be heard, and in time he was successful. The mob dispersed, leaving the constable in charge of the jail and his prisoner. A few days later the prisoner, who was John Moose, was tried and was acquitted, having proved an alibi.

Cronan went back to England, but returned in six month : to Medora, only to find that John Moose and his family had gone to Bismarck. He went to the latter place on his return trip from Wyoming and found the Moose family sungly quartered in a tepee on the bank of the Great Muddy. He learned that the girl had already been promised to a young buck named Four Toe, who had given her father a certain quantity of tobacco for her hand. Cronan and an interpreter went to the tepee of the lucky Four Toe and proceeded at once to negotiate for the purchase of the prospective bride. It was an up-hill job at first, but after several trips had been made to the lodge of Four Toe the redskin finally relinquished all his right, title, and interest in and to the Sioux maiden for the consideration of $25 in hand paid and ten pounds of cabbage-leaf tobacco to be delivered on the wedding day. Then the old warrior's consent was obtained to the proposed marriage and Cronan returned to England, after making arrangements with Col. Frank Dunean for the adoption of the girl and for her education. Picture Eyes attended the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., for two years and then was placed in a seminary at St. Paul, where her education was finished.-N. Y. Sun.

Bicycles in Egypt.

The bicycle has become wonderfully popular in Cairo during the last two ears, and there are many more maof white men gathered about the jail chines ridden by the members of both door evidently bent upon lynching the suburbs than anyone is apt to suppose. was a small man, stood upon the door This is not surprising, all things constep threatening to shoot the first man sidered. What is called the Ismailiya quarter is all new and pretty, with wide, smooth streets for practice, and there is rain only just often enough to prevent one from saying that it never rains. The climate lets one wheel every day in the year.

It is a delightful spin to the pyramids. Leaving the busy streets of the forts to have some one understand the city, you cross the great Nile bridge, skirt the lovely park of Gluzeh, and then run straightway for five miles down the Cronan, noticing the girl, asked who perfectly level tree-shaded avenue to she was, and was told that the man in the things to eat and drink. The disthe jail was her father, and that she tance is eight miles, and before one wanted the mob to spare his life for starts back he has plenty of time to her sake. Cronan, moved by the help- climb the big pyramid, shake hands lessness of the girl, decided to inter- with the sphinx, and use the tomb of the priest as a dark room to change his camera plates.-London Cyclist.

HINTS IN MEDICINE. Words of Advice for the Careful

Physicians constantly see patients who would be horror-stricken at the idea of being devoted to the whisky or brandy bottle, but who seem to think that there is no possible harm in re-sorting to wines of cocoa or kola with or without other ingredients. In many instances these wines contain such a large quantity of alcohol that in addition to the stimulating effect of their medicinal ingredients they produce an effect equivalent to that induced by a drink of whisky. They should, there fore, be employed only under the direc tion of a physician, and should a physician order them the prescription calling for them is not to be renewed inlefinitely, excepting under his advice

The same objections exist against the employment of all those preparations of bromide and caffeine which are utilized under different combined names in the treatment of headache, and very much the same objection exists, too, against many of the so-called headache powders or tablets which are now placed upon the market for the use of the unwary. It is true that they do re-lieve headache in many cases, but they should be used with caution. You should remember that a headache is a symptom, not a disease, and that it is symptom of many diseases, ranging all the way from so serious affections FROM THE DALLES TO PORTLAND. as Bright's disease and brain tumor to the headache due to lack of sleep. The removal of the symptom "headache" in a person suffering from Bright's disease may give such temporary relief that the patient will ignore the condi-tion of his kidneys and go to a physician only when his state is so serious that his headache cannot be put aside by these means, and when it is perhaps too late for him to gain any benefit from treatment. In many instances of nervous headache, quiet, rest, a suitable amount of sleep and a proper regula-tion of the diet are what the patient needs, and using headache powders is simply postponing the evil day, with compound interest to pay in the end .-H.
