BICYCLE VOICE NOW.

Enemies of Wheeling Say It Affects the Vocal Chords.

All the talk of the bicycle face having practically died out, the foes of the wheel have now trotted out another scarecrow, claiming that as a result of wheeling women are becoming loud talkers, with an unpleasant quality of They assert that wheeling, especially with the mouth open, has a detrimental effect on the vocal chords, and when to this is added the strain to which the voice is subjected in an effort to keep up a conversation while cycling the danger seems something more than a shadow. Some persons who have made voice culture a life study are inclined to fall in with these views, asserting that exercise on the wheel is responsible for an apparent alterationin the voices of women. One vocal

"While bicycle riding people frequently fill their lungs with dust, and this is, of course, injurious. Then the exercise leaves the system exhausted and unable to resist the bad effects of excessive perspiration. A severe cold is detrimental to the speaking voice, and when these colds are frequent, as they are with bicyclists, they will ufimutely result in parmanent injury.

If women would ride but a few miles at a time and would keep their mouths closed there would be no danger, but I find that many of my pupils cannot refrain from overdoing the sport. Pro-fessional women realize the harm that bicycling does to their voices, but they sny that they cannot bear to give up wheeling. Calling to one another as wheelwomen frequently do cannot help but strain the voice if persisted in." Another vocal instructor holds totally opposite views. Said she: "I am strongly in favor of cycling for wom-en. It is a most healthful exercise, and so cannot fail to be beneficial to the singing and speaking voice. I do not believe the old-fashioned theory of things affecting the vocal chords directly. Of course it is possible to strain the voice, but I should think this most unlikely when wheeling. The very tend-ency of the wheel is to keep the rider quiet. If riders should call from one to the other when outdoors their speaking voice might be affected, but the most strident speakers are often the sweetest singers. The soft, well-modulated voice of the English girl does not give us as many brilliant examples of the song bird as the less pleasant and somewhat nasal tones of the American. Nine out of every ten successful singers abroad to-day are Americans. This is because the other girls are never allowed to expand their lungs with the same delightful freedom. A good digestion is the first requisite toward good singing. I should say poor cooks have more to do with spoiling the voice than all the wheels in Christendom. A theory has been advanced that the rapid breathing necessary when riding the wheel is injurious. This is wrong, as the vocal chords are completely protected when not in use."-Philadelphia

MORAVIAN VIEW OF DEATH. & Beautiful and Impressive Custom of the Moravians.

Clifford Howard contributes to the Ladies' Home Journal an, interesting article upon the Moravians of Bethle hem, Pa., and their religious customs: "Upon the death of one of the congregation," he writes, "the event is announced, not by the monotonous, mournful tolling of the bell, but the deep-breathing, melodious sic of trombones, played in the open belfry steeple of the church by the brombone choir; and as the deep, sweet notes of the familiar hymn are borne to the people below they reverently drop their work to listen. 'Hark!' they whisper, 'the horns are blowing; some one has gone home!" Gone home!"perhaps nothing more beautifully exemplifies the perfect, unquestioning faith of these devout people than that expressive utterance, the sincerity of which is ever demonstrated by the lack of mourning at the passing away of a member of the household, however dearly beloved; so true and heartfelt is the Moravian belief that death is but the entrance to a brighter, happier home. The trombones are also used at the touching funeral services held at the grave; and amid their sad, yet inspiring, strains the departed one is laid to his eternal rest. On all occasions, whether of death or joy, the trombones lend their sweet solemnity in fitting breath. From the steeple they herald
