AMERICAN DOMESTIC COMMERCE

With a territory as large as Europe, a population double that of Great Britain, and domestic industries nearly equalling the aggregate of those of Great Britain, France and Germany, the foreign trade of the United States is much smaller than that of any of these countries. But in twenty years France increased her foreign trade three per cent, Germany eleven per cent., the United Kingdom seventeen per cent, and the United States sixty-six per cent. This growth is especially remarkable, and eighty-six per cent of American shipping is engaged in coasting or inland navigation, and as the bulk of the foreign trade is done on foreign bottoms.

This striking fact is elucidated and many other interesting phases of the growth and status of American industries are shown in an article entitled "Thirty Years of American Trade," by M. G. Mulhall, in the November North American Review. Mr. Mulhall "the true policy of the United States points to a free admission of all fibers, so as to stimulate textile industries, and thus render the country independent of foreign manufactures of this description." The conditions prevailing under the experimental free trade of the Wilson bill are of too recent occurrence for those interested in the wool industry to coincide in this opinion.

The eminent writer of the article suggests also that all custom houses between the United States, Mexico and Canada should be abolished without infringing on political independence. This, he argues, would double the trade between the United States and Canada to the benefit of both nations, but Canadian hay, lumber and coal have figured too largely in commercial affairs recently for Americans to appreciate the wisdom of such an alliance.

The internal trade of our country is estimated at $40,000,000 daily, and the external commerce a little over $5,000,000 daily. The former has increased forty-nine per cent since 1880, while the latter has risen barely ten per cent. Internal trade is the best gauge of national progress because it reflects the power, energy and resources of a people.—Wool Record.

The world may progress in some things, but the proportion of fools to wise men seems to remain as great as ever. Recent inquiry in the workings of the great gambling establishment, Monte Carlo, developed some interesting, as well as astounding, facts. In addition to the subsidy paid the Prince of Monaco, the gambling houses provide for and keep the judges, police, lighting, water, postoffice, clergy and charitable institutions. The total revenue of the tables last year was 1,540,000 pounds. An interesting item is the press subventions 25,000 pounds. It is stated that it is absolutely necessary to expend a large sum in securing the good will of the continental press, and it is said that over one-half the stories of suicides are only bids on the part of newspapers for a share in the "boodle." As the world grows better in some things, the refinement of civilization brings with it vices of a deeper type.

The representative of a number of eastern colonists is in The Dalles looking for some location suitable for such a settlement. This representative has visited all sections of the Willamette valley, but does not wish to make a choice until he has seen Eastern Oregon as well. These colonists wish to secure several thousand acres lying together. They come with money, and are prepared to build homes in a new country. It is immigration of this kind that efforts should be made to induce to this country. There is room in Wasco county for hundreds of more happy and prosperous homes, and when the simple truth is known, this section needs no other advertisement.

The Willamette valley can no longer claim superiority over Eastern Oregon in the matter of moisture. The Cascade mountains have allowed the rain-laden clouds to pass without any hindrance, and the amount of rainfall here this season will be above the average. Plenty of moisture is the farmer's want and whether it comes in the shape of snow or rain, its benefits are the same.
