HE WAS A STAYER.

Wasn't Going to Be Scared Off a Volcano by a Mere Eruption.
Advises by the Australian steamship Movers give news that an adventurous young Englishman named Carr, who, it is quite possible, may be Lieut. Seton-Karr, the most adventurous mountain climber and pioneer of the British Geographical Society, narrowly escaped destruction in a whirlwind of steam, cinders and stones preceding the deluge of lava emitted by old Ruapehu, New Zealand's famous volcano.
He had started, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, with two guides and provisions for ten days' exploration of the five peaks forming the great Ruapehu and fencing its famous crater lake. He got half way up the mountain side, when his progress was greatly retarded by a fresh fall of snow, a most unusual thing at this season.
From twenty-eight degrees the mercury rose within four hours to seventy-six degrees, the snow disappeared and earthquakes added their rumblings in the heart of the mountains to swell the mysterious feature of the night. The guides hourly became more uneasy and entreated Carr to break camp and descend before the eruption, which they anticipated would overwhelm them.
"You think the mountain will give fireworks for our benefit, do you?" was Carr's comment. "This is glorious; we will not disappoint old Ruapehu of his audience."
But the guides were not so enthusiastic, and finally announced that they were going whether he would or not. "Very good," was Carr's reply, "I will stay."
Then he paid them their wages for the portion of the trip only that they had actually performed. They hastily retraced their steps, and the very next day showers of mud, which invariably precede actual eruptions, commenced.
The guides decided that their late employer must be overwhelmed, and great was their surprise two days later to be rejoined by him at the base of the mountain.
He was scolded from head to foot; his left arm was broken, and there were bruises and cuts on every part of his body where he had been struck by stones which rained from the mountain top.

Hardly had the party reconnected when the eruption proper commenced, and for days the sight was a magnificent though awful one. Ruapehu is nine thousand odd feet high, and one of the most rugged and picturesque mountains in the Southern sea.
After the eruption Carr ascended on the west side, which had hardly been affected at all, owing to continued wind from that quarter, and it has been found that the famous crater lake had entirely disappeared, having been literally blown out and replaced by a bubbling field of lava, the depth of which cannot be estimated.

OVERRULED BY THEIR WIVES.

A Case Where All the Justices of the Supreme Court Changed Their Minds.
It was a matter of some surprise that Justice Salmas, of the United States supreme court, should have changed his mind within a few weeks upon a matter of law, but it is not many months since the whole court changed their mind on such a matter, and that in the course of a few days.
The case before the court, says the New York Sun, was one arising out of a customs decision at this port, and the counsel arguing against the decision of the custom house was a New York lawyer, then for the first time before the supreme court. The case turned mainly upon the question whether an article of importation should or should not be classed as a sauce. The custom house had called it a sauce and taxed it accordingly. The government maintained this contention, and, of course, the New York lawyer sought to show that the article should not be classed as a sauce.
When the supreme court came to consult upon the case their unanimous opinion was favorable to the contention of the government, and one of the justices was instructed to prepare a decision in favor of the custom house. The justice, on returning home, told his wife of the case, and indicated the ground of the decision; whereupon the lady told him in plain words that the justices of the supreme court did not know what they were talking about, and had agreed upon an unjust decision. The lady was entirely clear that the article in dispute could not properly be called a sauce, and openly ridiculed the court.

The perplexed justice, instead of preparing the decision in accordance with the instructions of his brethren, did nothing in the matter, but at the next opportunity unfolded to the other justices his wife's view of the matter, and asked them to seek domestic counsel on the case and report at the next consultation of the court. When that consultation came round the justices, having taken feminine counsel, all reported against the original view that the article involved in the case should be classed as a sauce, and accordingly the justice originally charged with the task of preparing a decision in favor of the government was now instructed to prepare one in favor of the New York lawyer's client. It thus happened that the lawyer won his first case before the supreme court because the wives of the justices knew more than the court itself.

CALIFORNIA UNDER SPAIN.

Trade Restrictions Which Were Deadly to the Young Colonies.
England was a careless parent. Her children, neglected by the mother country, forced to earn their own living while yet young, though having thus a sorry youth, still early developed strength, energy and ambition to do for themselves, and be free from parental rule. Spain, though she even fed and clothed her colonists, kept them strictly dependent upon her for the smallest as well as the greatest needs, discouraging freedom of thought as well as action, governing by a mass of rules to which was exacted implicit obedience. She thus kept a strong hold upon her most remote settlements, which rendered it difficult, almost impossible, for the colonists to develop into independent citizenship. Spanish trade restrictions were deadly to the young colonies, and at length almost suicidal to the parent land. No trade was allowed with other countries, and only with Spain herself through the one port of Seville, where it was rigidly inspected by the "house of trade"—that board of regulators with the narrowest ideas and instructions. All commerce had to be carried in Spanish vessels, so why should the settlers build ships? Trade between sister colonies was forbidden, and no foreign vessel could enter a harbor of a Spanish possession, or land a man without carrying a special permit. To prevent colonists trading with foreigners, death and forfeiture of property were the penalties. To strengthen further her peculiar trade policy, Spain forbade the cultivation in the colonies of such raw products as came into direct competition with home industries. The culture of hemp, tobacco, olives, grapes in vineyard, and many other articles, came under this list.—Overland Monthly.

Mexican Burials.

The Mexicans have a queer way of burying the dead. The corpse is tightly wrapped in century-plant matting and is placed in a coffin hired for about a shilling. One or two natives, as the case may be, place the coffin on their heads and go at a trot to the grave, where the body is interred, and the coffin is then returned. The wealthy class use the tram cars as hearses, and the friends follow beside the car on foot.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Humming Bird's Rain Signal.
One of the curious things about the humming bird is that when rain begins to threaten, the little creature shoots up into the air a hundred feet above the ground, poises there for a moment, and then dashes down with a whirring sound that is as loud as the whirr of a partridge. This noise is apparently a signal, as when it is heard the other birds in the vicinity seek cover.—Golden Days.

Nature Is Resting.

Not an island has risen or sunk from sight in the Pacific ocean in 34 years, and geologists say that nature is resting for a future mighty effort. A geologist predicts that within 50 years a convulsion of nature will sink the whole New Zealand 50 feet below the surface of the sea.—N. Y. Sun.

Building Made of Ashes.

A building has recently been erected by Herr Wagner, an architect in Limburg, solely of materials formed of ashes, without any admixture of sand. It is claimed that hard, natural stones of almost every variety have been successfully imitated with this very cheap material.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
