American Quail That Are Troubling Canadian Sportsmen.

The Birds Are So Swift of Wing That the Hunters Are Unable to Bag Thembome Objections to the Yankee Invaders.

Two years ago quail became very scarce in this part of the province of Ontario, says the New York Sun, and some enthusiastic sportsmen imported a couple of bevies from the southern states and turned them loose. This year they are reaping their reward, though it is not the kind they expected. That live quail are plentiful everyone agrees, but up to date very few dead birds have gladdened the hearts of the up from Portland Friday morning and is hunters. Whether the feathered colonists have acquired new habits since coming under the British flag or have independence peculiar to the republic no one knows, but they are certainly well able to take care of themselves. They are wild and wary and unlike the native Canadian quail are easily flushed. When flushed they fly straight for the thick woods, where it is difficult to get at them. They think nothing of flying half a mile to reach a thicket, ground they perch in the trees where no dogs can find them. The other day the sportsman who had most to do with bringing in the foreigners tramped about from sunrise till sunset, and, on being asked the customary question,

"What luck?" replied: "I am a sinful man, but not a liar. I didn't get a feather. I never saw such birds. They invariably flushed before the dogs got within fifty yards of them, and made for the woods, where it seemed impossible to find them."

After dinner he lit a cigar and gave his friends the benefit of his observations

"I don't believe there are more than a dozen flocks of these imported quail in the county," he said, "but they travel around so much they are seen everywhere, and in that way give the impression that the fields are full of them. I asked every farmer I met if there were any quail about. The answer always was: 'Plenty of them. I saw a big flock yesterday or the day before.' Now, I feel sure that many of these farmers saw the same flock. When the little native quails were plentiful they didn't travel about much. A flock would make its home in a cornfield where there was plenty of food and could be found there or in a neighboring field at any time. The dogs could get within a couple of yards of them before they would rise. and I never knew them to fly further than forty or fifty rods. Besides, they never flew except when disturbed, and when the dogs struck a trail they could find the flock by following it. When hunted the birds would fly back and forth in a couple of fields, and it was easy to kill a whole bevy in an afternoon. Of course that was why the native quail got killed off.

"But these new fellows seem to do a lot of their traveling on the wing. If a feeding ground doesn't suit them, they fly to another. Half a dozen times a day my dogs trailed a flock over a farm only to find that the birds had flown. I believe each flock now has a beat of a dozen or more farms over which it travels, and as the birds are seen at different times on all the farms, each farmer thinks he has a flock living with him just as in the past, and that is the cause of the opinion that

Modern Treatment of

The latest work on the treatment of diseases, written by forty eminent American physicians, says: "Cod-liver oil has done more for the consumptive than all other remedies put together." It also says: "The hypophosphites of lime and soda are regarded by many English observers as specifics for consumption."

quail are plentiful."

The sportsman who brings home a bag of half a dozen birds this year does well, though it was by no means unusual for a good shot five or six years ago to make a bag of twenty or thirty. The men who imported the quail are satisfied with the result, even though they haven't killed many yet, for they say that such wary birds can take good care of themselves and will in time become very plentiful. But some are dubious of this and say that an oldfashioned hard winter will kill off the strangers. The last couple of winters have been very mild. Besides they have noticed that the birds are rather stupid and easily killed in cold weather -in fact, there is very little use hunting them on fine days. But though there are some doubters among the sportsmen they all approve of the attempt to restock the county with game. Col. Denison, of Toronto, however, strongly disapproves of it. He is a descendant of the United Empire Loyalists, and so "truly loyal" that he thinks there should be a law passed to keep rebellious American game out of the country. He sees in this attempt to colonize the fields and wood with Yankee quail an effort to foment annexation.

PUBLIC SERVICE IN CHINA. Two Merits of the Competitive Educa tional System.

Ex-Secretary John W. Foster, who was the confidential adviser of the emperor of China in the peace negotiations with Japan, contributes a paper on "The Viceroy Li Hung Chang" to the August Century. Mr. Foster says of

"He does not regard the competitive educational system of admission to the public service as a perfect method and more than once he has recommended to and often instead of alighting on the his emperor material modifications in the existing system. But it must be confessed that it has stood the test of centuries with much benefit to China, and its practical operation has demonstrated that it possesses two merits of inestimable value to any nation; first. it brings all the offices of the empire within the reach of the lowest subject; and secondly, it diminishes the meentives to, and opportunities of, corruption and favoritism in securing entrance into official life. But in China the competitive examination ends with the admission; beyond that step promotion must come through other methods. I.l Hung Chang secured the right of admission to office through his assiduous application to study, and every suc- DRS GEISENDORFFER & RUEDY, ceeding step in his upward career has been attained by his own genius and capacity."
