TULD BY AN OLD SEITLER. Tenderfoots Concluded to Leave the West and Go Home.

"It is the proper thing, as a matter of course, to talk of things which happened in the early days of a country as having more fun and excitement in them than the prosaic days of these times," said an old settler in a reminiscent mood, which mood in an old settler is an indication of a happy state of mind. "But, in reality, some funny things did happen then. The story 1 have in mind occurred away back-before there was much settlement in this country-and when it was the custom for adventurous and enterprising men to establish ranches where wanderers over the face of the earth who came that way might find something to cat. There was one of these places down ha a southern county, merely a hut tilled with provisions, and guarded by two men and a couple of dozen guns.

"One day they were surprised to see a man drive up with a wagon well them that he was going to start a ranch in the valley just below them. They did not express themselves one way or and camped for the night under a bluff opposite them. Some time after he came up and found the boys had all their guns out cleaning them. There was quite an array as they lay in a row

" 'Going hunting, boys?'

"No, the boys were not going hunting. Then what are you cleaning up your guns for?" The boys thought they might want to use them-that was all "The newcomer went back to his wagon, and the boys, setting up a tin can on the edge of the bluff, began shooting at it as a mark. And they made their bullets go nearer the stranger's wagon than they did the can.

"This proceeding evidently gave the would-be ranchman the idea that his company was not wanted, and in the morning he came up to parley.

"'I don't want to have any trouble with you boys,' he said. 'Just show me how far your land goes, and I will drive off it before I build.' He was inform that their land extended exactly as in as their rifles could shoot. This was n' uncomfortable answer, and the man dis shoot, and if nothing hit him he might consider that he was off their land. "This was not encouraging, but he started out, and when he reached that handkerchief. The boys considered this as a truce to stop firing until they had heard what he had to say, and let him come up. Then he informed them that he had been mistaken in his desire to settle in that part of the country. In fact, he did not want to settle there, and would turn around and go home, if they would let him They let him."-Chicago Times-Herald.

What an American Sees in His Trips About the Great City-It Is Easy to Distinguish the People from This Side.

The world will surely turn upside down if the English begin to change their ways. It looks as if this were going to happen. They are showing an County, Oregon. ing to happen. Vestibuled trains with saloon cars are appearing on the railways and the theaters are begin-ning to give away programmes to the audiences. But the most surprising, rock-shivering revolution makes the intest news of the week—the city mer-chants have formally agreed to let their clerks wear straw hats. It has been as hot as Chicago during a national con-vention, so something had to be done (for the alerks but who walld have for the cierks, but who would have dreamed that the traditional dress of tens of thousands of clerks who have gone about sweltering in their hats was thus suddenly to be changed? It probably has taken ever since the French revolution for them to get their high hats and no one supposed they would lose them inside of another century. This change makes it bothersome for This change makes it bothersome for me to pick out the Americans in the streets. For weeks I have been riding about on the tops of 'buses (the chariots of the masses) and picking out Amer-icans by their derby hats and straw tiles. Fancy my surprise, then, when tilles. Fancy my surprise, then, when gon. I see on the Strand my eigar counter clerk in a straw hat, and Bob Fitzsimmens, the champion of the world, in a silk tile. By the way, I stepped down from my chariot when I saw the pugilist and said: "Hello! are you over here to fight?" "No," said he, and his answer was such as Alexander might have made when he had rounded up the world. "There's nobody here to fight. I can stop them all in four rounds."

There is another way of telling Americans without looking at their hats. It is by their quick, alert, nervous movements, their bright, wide-awake faces and their conscious independence and pride. You thought I was going to say by their speech, but that is not so. The sharp, nasal speech that the English ascribe to us is only the heritage of a few of us, and we got it from the English. Down in Cornwall and up in Yorkshire they have the same sharp "a" that we use. Here in London the cockneys all say "caow," and "raound," and "naow," just as our Philadelphians and some Yankees do. No: there is no sense in that old gibe about our speech. We got it from these folks, and we left it here besides .- N. Y. Journal.

Wonderfol Feather Work

Among the strange tribes of men about whom little is known are the Chamaeocos, living on the upper Paraguay river. An Italian artist, Signor Boggiani, who visited these people not long ago, has given a vivid description of their appearance and customs. Like all wild tribes in warm countries, they wear very little clothing, but they excel in the art of making personal adornments from the feathers of hirds. Then country abounds with birds of the mobeautiful plumage, including parrots. toucans and trogons, whose feathers are dazzling in color, rheas, with gray plumes, musk ducks of a glossy black color, egrets with feathers of pure white, and spoonbills of a delicate pint hue. The Chamacocos combine all th wealth of colored and graceful plumage in an artistic manner, and some of these savages, tall and of perfect shape, walk their forest glades in habiliments more brilliant, if less ample, than a Paris modiste could produce .--- Golden Days.

Ascending Mont Blanc.

It is an expensive as well as, a very tiresome undertaking to ascend Mont Blanc. It costs at least fifty dollars a person, for by the law of the commune of Chamouni, each stranger is obliged to have two guides and a porter. So far as the danger is concerned it is now reduced to a minimum, but almost every year the mountain claims a victim. Bad weather is the chief thing feared by the guides, and so swiftly does it come that a cloudless sky may in fifteen minutes turn to a blinding snowstorm which beats you to the ground. Thus it was that some years ago a party of eleven persons perished. Five were found frozen stiff in the snow; the other six lie buried in the Glacier des Boissons. Forty years is the time al-lowed for the glacier to yield them up in the valley below.
